The present document has been prepared within the framework of the authority and competencies of the Cyprus Agency of Quality Assurance and Accreditation in Higher Education, according to the provisions of the “Quality Assurance and Accreditation of Higher Education and the Establishment and Operation of an Agency on Related Matters Laws of 2015 and 2016” [N. 136 (I)/2015 and N. 47(I)/2016].

A. Guidelines on content and structure of the report

- The Higher Education Institution (HEI) based on the External Evaluation Committee’s (EEC’s) evaluation report (Doc.300.1.1) must justify whether actions have been taken in improving the quality of the programme of study in each assessment area.
- In particular, under each assessment area, the HEI must respond on, without changing the format of the report:
 - the findings, strengths, areas of improvement and recommendations of the EEC
 - the deficiencies noted under the quality indicators (criteria)
 - the conclusions and final remarks noted by the EEC
- The HEI’s response must follow below the EEC’s comments, which must be copied from the external evaluation report (Doc. 300.1.1).
- In case of annexes, those should be attached and sent on a separate document.

Dear CYQAA Board Members,

Before proceeding with the analysis of each assessment area, EIMF would like to comment separately on the introductory comments made by the EEC and the issues raised by them. Though the issues raised in the introduction are all tackled at various points in the reply, it is still important to clarify certain points before reviewing each assessment area separately.

The key issues highlighted by the EEC in the introduction and EIMF's comments are listed below:

I. (In)adequate Academic Resource:

One needs to have in mind that EIMF is still in the process of securing approval to become a higher education institute. At this point, it is important to note that EIMF is an established executive/professional training centre with ongoing operations expanding both in Cyprus and abroad and with a noticeable profitable record. The financial reassurance stemming from the profitable executive/professional training activities and the commitment from the EIMF management in becoming a high-quality academic institution, act as a guarantee that the necessary investments will be made so as to secure that EIMF lacks no academic or other resources.

II. Inconsistencies, errors and incomplete application:

EIMF acknowledges that there were certain omissions and inconsistencies in the original application submitted. These were dealt to some extent with the additional material provided on the day of the External Review while in EIMF's reply the aim has been to tackle these issues in a consistent and efficient manner.

III. (In)adequate Research:

The EEC have mentioned that 'there is little evidence that there is adequate research'.

Given the concerns of the EEC, the EIMF wishes to highlight that EIMF has not yet operated as a higher education institution in order to have a track record of how it promotes and undertakes research. The Organisation has a clear commitment in promoting research and this will be secured through its research strategy.

The necessary policies and processes have been decided in order to secure that the academic staff will engage in quality research and produce outcomes that can be utilised in the courses offered. In particular, EIMF has set a clear Research Strategy presented on the day of the External Review that is committed in implementing. This strategy explicitly states that it will support research activities and outcomes that will.

- achieve high quality publications in reputable international journals
- be integrated in the programmes of study, where possible, and thus enhance the quality of teaching
- support public events that will allow for dissemination of knowledge, directed both to the financial and professional services sectors but also to society at large

Other relevant information from the Research Presentation include:

- Research Direction: In implementing its research objectives, EIMF promotes an interdisciplinary research direction that covers the areas related to Finance, Regulation, Corporate Governance, Risk and Compliance. This will allow members of the academic staff that come from different theoretical backgrounds to engage in common research projects.
- Research Committee: In securing the research objectives, EIMF has set up a Research Committee that will have an active role in coordinating and ensuring that publications are achieved in reputable (peer-reviewed) outlets. The Committee will be headed by an established academic and long-term EIMF-associate Assistant Professor Christina Livada (Research Coordinator). This will allow for a better coordination and cooperation of the academic staff (with different academic backgrounds).
- EIMF has also concluded a pre-agreement (to come in effect once the Institute is accredited) with Professor Waymond Rodgers (University of Hull) to be appointed as Senior Research Advisor based on a fractional appointment. His main duties will be to:
 - Attend research committee meetings and provide guidance on strategic objectives and on undertaken or scheduled research by EIMF academic staff.
 - Assess research methodologies adopted by EIMF academics and suggest various research trainings that will assist the academics;
 - suggest other research institutions that EIMF can cooperate with;
 - examine possible research synergies with EIMF staff and joint projects or publications, etc.
 - teaching and learning are adequately enlightened by research work
- Research Support: The EIMF Board has confirmed its commitment that both permanent faculty members and part-time/adjunct academic staff will be encouraged and supported in their research activities (financially and otherwise)
- Internal Research Funding
 - Based on a Board Decision, 2% of the EIMF's total revenues will be allocated towards research. Once the academic programmes start running, the percentage will be re-examined and decided according to revenues deriving solely from these.
 - For each permanent member of the EIMF faculty a fixed amount (1,000 euro) will be available annually for his/her research activities (e.g. participation in international conferences, purchase of relevant literature, etc.). Each academic will receive the amount only after submitting the relevant justification to the Research Committee. In case the academic requires a higher amount, a formal request with the relevant justification should be submitted for approval to the Research Committee.

- Non-permanent academic staff will be entitled to a fixed sum (remuneration) following publication in a peer-reviewed journal that is done under the EIMF's name. The sum will be 2,000 euro for a single-authored journal or 1,000 euro if there are more than one authors
- Collaboration with other institutions: The EIMF is determined to expand its research network through collaborations with renowned research centres and joint research initiatives. Already a Letter of Intent has been agreed with the Jean Monnet Centre of Excellence of the University of Manchester (interdisciplinary centre). Such collaborations will also enable access to large data bases and sources for research purposes.
- Participation in Research Projects: The EIMF will actively pursue participation in funded research projects (both at the national and European level)
 - EIMF has already conducted the relevant local research agency (Research Promotion Foundation - RPF) so as to initiate a direct line of communication and has registered in IRIS to access the RPF's online services. A member of the administrative staff will be responsible for acting as the contact point between research agencies (including RPF) and the academic staff so as to inform them of all call-openings and provide the necessary administrative support where necessary.
 - EIMF is in direct contact with MAP Innovation (belongs to the same Group of Companies). The Director of MAP Innovation has relevant experience in project management and has an extensive network of contacts based on prior participation in both European and national funded projects.
 - Furthermore, communication has been established with GrantXpert, the leading local consulting firm specialising in consulting services for EU funding programmes and structural funds. GrantXpert provides training in relation to EU funding opportunities and project management and this is an area EIMF intends to build expertise by initiating a collaboration agreement with GrantXpert.

Research Evaluation: The number and quality of publications will be evaluated by the Research Committee and considered a determining factor in the professional advancement of each academic. Each academic (member of faculty) will be expected to:

- Have 2-3 publications every 5 years in reputable peer-reviewed journals. The median impact factor of the discipline area of the journal will be taken into consideration when the Research Committee evaluates the quality of the journal. In case an academic article is published in a non-English-speaking academic journal, the Research Committee will examine its quality accordingly and on an ad-hoc basis.
- Participate in International Conferences on an annual basis
- Have at least a monograph or book publication in a recognized publishing house in order to advance to the position of Professor

Importantly, it is worth noting that the composition of academic team now includes two new academics on a part-time basis from established academic institutions that have a solid record of academic research in their fields of expertise. The presence of Dr Nikitas-Spiros Koutsoukis and Dr Edina Harbinja will have added value for the academics of the EIMF and open new horizons for cooperation on interdisciplinary research activities. Further details can be found for both academic in Section 3 'Teaching Staff'

1. Study programme and study programme's design and development (ESG 1.1, 1.2, 1.8, 1.9)

EEC Comments:

- Findings
 - The program design is coherent, but the target market does not appear to be appropriate for this program. The module descriptions in many case gave inadequate information to evaluate the program.
- Strengths
 - The institution has clearly identified the target demand for such a program, and has demonstrated enthusiasm to run the program. The institution shows a high degree of entrepreneurial spirit.
 - The institution has a reputation in executive education.
- Areas of improvement and recommendations
 - Recruiting somebody who has experience in university program management.
 - Develop an appropriate marketing strategy.
 - Rapidly developed detailed distance learning module material for at least one course.

Regarding the strengths of this assessment area, EIMF would like to note that the EEC has recognised its successful record of operating as an executive/professional training centre while there is also a positive reference to the coherence of the programme. Overall, the marks awarded reflect a positive approach by the EEC as the average mark exceeds 7.5 with EIMF scoring 9 marks in many cases.

Nevertheless, the EEC has underlined certain concerns and EIMF has tackled these in a constructive manner and as part of its effort to improve the Programme and reach the necessary quality standards.

Analytically, EIMF wishes to deal with the comments in the sections 'Areas of Improvement and Recommendations' and 'Findings' and address all those quality indicators/criteria that received a mark less than 7.

Quality Indicators: - Marks below 7:

- (1.1) Academic oversight of the programme design is ensured → 5
- (1.4) The purpose and objectives of the programme are consistent with the expected learning outcomes and with the mission and the strategy of the institution → 5
- (1.5) The following ensure the achievement of the programme's purpose, objectives and the learning outcomes
 - (1.5.7) The research orientation of the programme → 4
- (1.7) The teaching and learning process is adequate and effective for the achievement of the expected learning outcomes → 1

- (1.14) The European Credit Transfer System (ECTS) is applied and there is correspondence between credits, workload and expected learning outcomes per course and per semester → 5
- (1.17) The programme's management in regard to its design, its approval, its monitoring and its review, is in place → 5
- (1.18) The programme's collaborations with other institutions provide added value and are compared positively with corresponding collaborations of other departments / programmes of study in Europe and internationally → 6
- (1.22) The teaching methodology is suitable for teaching in higher education → 4

Specific Comments by EEC:

- (1.1) Academic oversight does exist but needs to be enhanced.
- (1.4) There is a mismatch between the target audience and the target audience needs.
- (1.7) The promised program material for one module delivered by distance learning was not provided. Therefore, this point cannot be evaluated.
- (1.9) They will benefit from improving reading lists to include more recent literature.
- (1.14) The workload in the syllabus was not enough to justify 10 ECTS points for each course.
- (1.17) We have seen things documented but there is no evidence that the internal evaluation committee is working effectively.
- (1.18) The fact of effective collaboration is understandable since they are not an approved institution and a delay of a year may improve the situation.
- (1.20) The standard [admission] requirements are perfectly acceptable, but the EEC has concerns that there may be a big number of exceptions.
- (1.22) We have not seen adequate material to assess whether the teaching methodology is suitable

EIMF Reply:

Target market (Mentioned in the section 'Findings'):

With reference to the report of the EEC, the comment 'The program design is coherent, but the target market does not appear to be appropriate for this program' is mentioned as a weakness but at the same time they highlight that: 'the institution has clearly identified the target demand for such a program'. As EIMF we consider that because of the interdisciplinary nature of the degree and its relevance to contemporary/current issues and trends in the wider financial market there is indeed a clearly identified demand that is based on a wide market/pool of professionals and recent graduates. The target audience comprises of the following groups:

- A lawyer, compliance or risk officer, regulator or policy maker who wishes to enhance his/her knowledge and understanding of corporate governance, compliance, regulatory risk, financial law and regulation.
- Recent university graduates and young professionals at the start of their professional path keen to develop their career in this sector: the interdisciplinary nature of the program means that applicants are not required to have a law degree nor a professional qualification in law.
- Experienced professionals (from other industries) with different backgrounds who want to move into the compliance sector in the financial sector or enhance their knowledge in a field that has become critical in the running of financial and professional services
- A professional working in state agencies in charge of production, supervision and enforcement of regulatory laws, such as central banks, securities and exchange commissions or insurance regulators.

It is also important to note that EIMF has a current pool of alumni, consisting of more than 500 individuals that have attained a professional qualification from EIMF and/or have attended any other of EIMF's training seminars. Specifically, these individuals may have completed one of the global professional qualifications – relating to Anti-Money Laundering (AML), Sanctions and Risk by ACAMS (Association of Certified Anti-Money Laundering Specialists), Compliance and Risk by CISI (Chartered Institute for Securities & Investment), Data Privacy and Security by IAPP (International Association of Privacy Professionals), Cybersecurity from EXIN (Examination Institute for Information Science) and antibribery by PECB (Professional Evaluation and Certification Board). Alternatively, they may have attained one of the professional certificates offered by EIMF in 'AML and Compliance' and 'Governance Financial Regulation and Compliance' or have attended any of the other training seminars. Importantly, however, the feedback received from this alumni network is that more in-depth knowledge is required in these areas and this can be achieved through the MSc programme in Governance, Risk and Compliance. Essentially this makes them potential candidate for the MSc Programme offered by EIMF.

In light of the above and given the strong connections with professionals in the legal and financial services and by being part of a wider group that offers a wide range of professional/financial services, EIMF wants to reiterate its confidence that the MSc in Governance, Risk and Compliance (Distance Learning) will fill a gap in the market and that this Programme undoubtedly matches the needs of a great number of individuals that wish to further explore this field and pursue a successful professional career in relevant businesses.

Marketing Strategy (in response to comments mentioned in the section 'Areas of Improvement and Recommendations')

The EIMF already has a strong marketing team that successfully develops the relevant strategies for the professional/executive education courses. This team will be responsible for the preparation and implementation of the MSc marketing strategy under the guidance of EIMF General Manager Marios Siathas who has more than twenty years' experience in the education industry and also has a marketing background. The marketing strategy for the promotion of the MSc programme will include the following actions:

- Participation in local educational and professional events (i.e. career fairs).
- Organising separate events for HR managers of businesses and Educational Consultants both in Cyprus and abroad to present and inform them about the MSc Programme. The EIMF has already a physical presence in the UK (as London Governance and Compliance Academy – LGCA: <https://lgca.uk/>) and partnerships in other countries (such as Israel, Belgium and Lithuania). Though its international network it will be able to better promote the course abroad.
- Use of google and social media ADS throughout the year. This will help to increase awareness, make the audience familiar with the program, and deal with requests on a continuous basis. EIMF has already a strong presence on key social media and a significant network of individuals from relevant professional backgrounds.
- As with other academic degrees to be offered by EIMF, the MSc programme will be showcased on study-related web portals which EIMF already has accounts and collaborations, such as Findcourses.com, Reedcourses.com, Masterstudies.com, studentlife.com.cy and others.
- Publication of short articles, highlighting the importance of Governance, Risk and Compliance, on a regular basis (blogs, websites, social media), thus underlining the significance and relevance of the course content to modern day businesses/corporations.
- Arranging one-to-one meetings with employers informing them about the MSc Programme and how their employees and organisation can benefit from it.
- Contacting the EIMF's extensive professional/executive education alumni network → individuals that have graduated from our existing professional qualifications (offered by global certification bodies) and presenting to them the new academic programmes.
- Presentations will be arranged for the relevant events of professional bodies and associations. Importantly, EIMF will make use of its networks of partners abroad such as CISI and ACAMS, IAPP.
- Presentation of the MSc Programme to university and college students both in the local universities and to targeted undergraduate student audiences abroad
- Offering partial or full scholarships for outstanding performance and disadvantaged individuals.
- Contracting student recruiters (agents) in Cyprus and abroad
- EIMF will utilise the business network of affiliated companies within the MAP Group
- The EIMF alumni network (more than 500 individuals individuals that have undertaken professional training courses, long-distance or through the conventional teaching method, or attained professional qualifications via EIMF) are to be targeted as they are potential customers

Availability of Module on-line (in response to comment in section 'Areas of improvement and recommendations' - Rapidly developed detailed distance learning module material for at least one course)

The Module GRC705 on Corporate Governance has been uploaded on the Classe365 learning platform. When logged in the platform, one can have a picture of how the module will be delivered to the students. The login details are available in the cover letter.

Firstly, it must be noted that on the 'Resources' section the following key documents are available for the students to download:

- The complete course outline with detailed analysis of the weekly activities that will be conducted.
- 'EIMF Guideline for Student Assessment' (offers a thorough analysis on how the students will be assessed and provided with feedback - a separate section on each of the types of assessment is offered: exams, assigned essay, group work, participation in discussion forums)
- A timetable for the course (the timetable includes: when the weekly office hours will take place, when the lecture presentations will be uploaded, when the live sessions will take place, the deadlines for all assignments)
- A study pack that has at least one of the key readings for each week.

For each of the 15 weeks, the following items are available (the documents below are downloadable and can thus be accessed offline):

- Lecture Objectives
- Learning Outcomes
- Presentation
- Key literature/References
- Learning Activities

For the learning activities of each week, a wide range of tools are being used to better assist the students. Indicative, the following learning tools have been uploaded on the learning platform:

- Video produced by EIMF (asynchronous) – For week 1 a video on 'Corporate Governance' prepared by EIMF has been uploaded. This video is indicative of the quality of videos the EIMF has produced until now. In total EIMF has a library of more than 50 videos which amount to more than 200 hours of playing time and focus on issues of governance, risk and compliance. The following link offers the list of videos available to be used in all modules for the MSc programme (Link - https://eimf.matrixlms.com/visitor_class_catalog/category/21743)

- Relevant videos available from youtube – For weeks 3 and 4 relevant videos available on youtube are used as part of the learning activities and the students have to deal with specific questions related to these videos
- Short Quizzes – For week 3 a multiple-choice quiz is available for the students and for week 5 a ‘true or false’ quiz is available. Indicatively, one multiple choice and one true-or-false quizzes have been uploaded to allow for one to see how these quizzes operate in practice.
- Media Article – For week 2 an article from forbes.com has been uploaded. Media articles will be frequently used by the teaching instructors.
- Discussion Forum – For discussion topics have been uploaded (week 4, 6, 9, 12) where students are expected to participate and be assessed accordingly
- The first live session has been arranged for Week 1 and the relevant invitation is available on the learning platform. The synchronous live sessions will be done via ClickMeeting and then uploaded on the platform. The live sessions (synchronous communication) will be done via ClickMeeting (a webinar software already used by EIMF’s executive training instructors) and then uploaded on the platform. ClickMeeting is a invaluable e-tool that offers practical options to the presenter/instructor doing the live sessions, such as:
 - Students are invited in advance to attend the live sessions and the invitations is added to their calendars
 - The presenter has the ability to:
 - See which students are online
 - Make notes on the presentation
 - Control video/audio interventions from the students
 - Record and upload the video
 - Students can ask questions at any point through the presentation

Institution: Mission and Strategy and Programme: Purpose, Objectives and Learning Outcomes (In response to Comment 1.4)

In order to assess whether the purpose and objectives of the programme and the expected learning outcomes are consistent with the mission and the strategy of the institution it is best to first outline what these are.

Mission and Strategy of EIMF

EIMF is an established training centre for professionals that aims to expand its operations by becoming an accredited higher education institute offering academic programmes. The mission and vision of EIMF are listed below:

- EIMF's mission: To equip individuals with essential knowledge, skills and qualifications so as to be successful in their career and life.
- EIMF's vision: To become an established academic institution, producing high quality research and providing both premium academic programmes and specialised professional training, thus bridging the gap between Academia and the Business Community.

Moreover, EIMF's School of Academic Studies has a strategic goal and is committed to:

- Offering programmes that will allow EIMF graduates to successfully advance their professional career
- Creating, discovering and disseminating knowledge that will have a positive impact on the business community and society at large
- Educating students through state-of-the-art teaching facilities/infrastructure
- Preparing a diverse student body to be leaders and engaged citizens

Aims and Objectives of the MSc

The key objective of the Master's in Governance, Risk and Compliance is to provide an advanced education for qualified college graduates and professionals who wish to enhance their knowledge, critical thinking ability, problem-solving skills and research competencies in order to respond to the new and complex regulatory challenges in the global financial industry.

Through the courses offered the aim is for students to comprehend and embed a new compliance culture that will later on enable them to become (1) the drivers of change towards a more ethical approach thus strengthening the sustainability and accountability of their companies and (2) protect these companies against money laundering and cybercrime, personal data breach, violation of the regulatory framework, market abuse and financial crime in general.

Students will be offered the chance to undertake a unique journey with a practical case-study approach and build the essential knowledge and skills to assure the reputation and assets of top companies around the world. EIMF aims to achieve all its key objectives with an expert teaching team and an innovative curriculum with an all-rounded education in corporate governance.

Intended (Expected) Learning Outcomes of the MSc:

The Intended Learning Outcomes are in line with the overall objectives of the Programme and by achieving these outcomes, the objectives of the course are guaranteed. The Learning Outcomes of the Programme are the following:

- Introduce the principles and theories that underlie the field and the role of financial regulation, risk assessment and legal mechanisms in averting and/or managing financial crises
- The development of a sophisticated understanding of the regulatory framework of the financial sector
- To foster corporate cultural values and design solutions posed by the challenges of the new global economy
- To strengthen the students' analytical capacity through a multidisciplinary approach
- To provide the required know-how and skills to deal with current risks and upcoming challenges
- To foster the value of sound corporate governance and compliance and to widen the students' knowledge of financial regulation and international and comparative aspects of law
- To address the public policy aspects of financial regulation and corporate governance
- Develop the skills in legal analysis and compliance with laws and regulation required for a dynamic career related to the law, regulation and practice of financial markets, or to the financial services sector

EIMF believes that the objectives and intended learning outcomes of the MSc in Governance, Risk and Compliance are in line with the overall mission and vision of the school which aims to equip individuals with essential knowledge, skills and qualifications so as to be successful professionals. Through the learning outcomes students are guaranteed a thorough understanding of contemporary issues in governance, risk and compliance that need to be tackled by modern day corporations and therefore increase their potential for a successful professional career.

Programme Management (Design, Approval, Monitoring and Review) (In response to comment in section 'areas of improvement' and in the comments for points 1.1 and 1.17)

The EIMF has established clear procedures relating to the design, approval and finalisation of the programmes of study.

I. Design and Approval

The Programme Coordinator has the leading role in overseeing the development of the Programme. There are specific steps that need to be followed for an EIMF programme to be decided:

1. The Academic Committee having taken into consideration the Institute's Strategy, a relevant feasibility study, the market and society needs → Initiates the procedure of developing a programme by assigning a Programme Coordinator
2. Programme Coordinator assigns courses to each academic
3. Leading Academic for each course prepares course outline/study-guide
4. Programme Coordinator assesses the courses and offers feedback/suggests changes
5. First draft of Programme finalised and submitted to Academic Committee
6. Academic Committee provides feedback and comments - Programme finalised
7. Quality Assurance Committee will assess (1) the quality of the programme offered and (2), through auditable trails, the involvement of all relevant academics in the development of the programmes offered

II. Monitoring and Review

Quality Assurance Committee

On the day of the external review EIMF argued that there were 2 academics assigned for each module, something that would strengthen the quality of the modules. Nevertheless, the EEC commented that the number of full-time academics EIMF intends to hire may not be supported by the Institution's budget (see section 3 comment: "There is a plan to recruit 6 full-time academic staff, by this is not supported by the financial projections of the feasibility study"). In response to this, EIMF concluded that there will be one academic assigned for each course and, importantly, the Quality Assurance Committee will have a more significant, intervening and fundamental role to play.

Adjusting the role of Quality Assurance Committee: As part of its mandate (presented to the EEC) it is mentioned that the Committee is allowed to invite external reviewers (established academics with relevant expertise) when deemed necessary to help in the assessment of programmes (existing and new ones). Following the comments by the EEC, the Quality Assurance Committee will have as an obligatory duty to assign to an external academic (or a team of academics) the task of assessing the quality of the Programme on annual basis. The external reviewer(s) will focus on the following:

- The number and relevant of the modules offered for each course
- The content of the modules (the lectures week-by-week, including the reading material suggested)
- The student assessment procedure (including random checks on the assignments the students submit)
- Admission criteria and process

The external reviewer(s) will also be invited to deal with cases where there are complaints by students (e.g. on the marking they received, the quality of the courses offered, admission to the programme or not) that are not satisfied by the EIMF's official response and an independent view is necessary.

The Quality Assurance Committee will have the critical role of assessing the quality of EIMF on all issues including: Academic Programmes, Student Support and Research. The Committee meets at least once each semester.

Composition of Quality Assurance Committee:

General Manager
Academic Director
Head of Research Coordination
Heads of Schools
Registrar
2 Academic Staff Members
Student Representative (Postgraduate)
Student Representative (Undergraduate)

The above described processes secure that the programme's management in regard to its design, its approval, its monitoring and its review, is solid and thorough. Nevertheless, given that EIMF is not yet an authorised tertiary education institution and that these processes have just now been adjusted, it is not possible to provide evidence of their implementation.

Recruiting somebody who has experience in university program management (In response to comment made in section 'areas of improvement and recommendations')

EIMF has noted the comment made by the EEC for the recruiting of someone with experience in University Programme Management but at this point in time, there is no intention to proceed with such a recruitment, given the competencies, experience and expertise of EIMF's General Manager (Marios Siathas) and Academic Director (Adonis Pegasiou).

- Marios Siathas (General Manager) has worked in academic institutions, executive education, learning and development, and consulting for more than 20 years. During this time Mr Siathas has held numerous positions and has managed and implemented large projects both locally and overseas. In 1999 he worked for one year at the University of Guelph (Ontario, Canada) in the Alumni affairs office and was also responsible for the International exchange students. Upon his return to Cyprus in 2001 he started working at the Cyprus International Institute of Management (CIIM) as an operations manager responsible for several aspects of the management of the two master's programmes offered at the time by CIIM. During the next 8 years he was involved in several projects including the design and launch of three new master's programmes (Financial Services, Human Resources Management and Educational Leadership), the international accreditation of the MBA programmes, international recruitment and presenting CIIM abroad. He was also the CIIM appointed representative at the Association of Cyprus private tertiary education institutions. Working alongside other local Universities and Colleges he travelled to China, Russia and Greece in an effort by the Chamber of Commerce and Industry, and the Ministry of Education to promote education in Cyprus. He helped set up several of the operations units at CIIM including the admissions office, the international student's office, the research centre and the Erasmus office. He worked closely with the Academic Director and was involved in the hiring process of new academics and the overall operations. In addition, he had a close cooperation with both the alumni association and the student association to further enhance the CIIM community and experience. In 2010 he was appointed Director of Executive education and Chair of Operations and Marketing Committee. He left CIIM in 2015 and founded the European Institute of Management and Finance (EIMF) which he has run with remarkable success.

He holds a BSc in Marketing and Management from Western Kentucky University, an MBA from the University of Guelph, and a Master's degree in Adult Education and Training from Colorado State University.

- Adonis Pegasiou is the Academic Director of EIMF and Coordinator of the MSc Programme. He has extensive experience from both academic posts and key management positions in large corporations that adequately equip him to coordinate and run the MSc Programme.

Academically he has teaching experience as a Seminar Convenor at the University of Manchester, part-time lecturer at the European University Cyprus (EUC) and Adjunct Lecturer at the University of Cyprus where he was solely responsible for preparing, delivering and assessing the students for a total of more than 8 modules and with excellent feedback. In addition, he was awarded post-doctoral funding from the Research Promotion Foundation of the Republic of Cyprus and was offered a 30-month full-time post as Research Associate at the EUC Research Centre (responsible for completing and delivering all the requirements of the project which entailed managing and coordinating all involved parties). The experience from three different universities and different posts that involved the preparation of delivery of new modules and daily interaction with students has certainly offered invaluable experience in relation to his appointment as Programme Coordinator. In addition, he has served in high ranked professional positions (e.g. Board Director in one of the local systemic banks and an airline) that require coordination, management and leadership skills. The management skills acquired are essential in fulfilling his tasks as Programme Coordinator.

Research Orientation of the Programme (In response to point 1.5.7)

Extensive reference to the research strategy and policies that EIMF intends to implement has already been made in the introductory section.

Additionally, in an attempt to further strengthen the research orientation of the programme:

- The reading lists of the Programmes have been adjusted (as part of the revision of certain modules) in order to include more recent publications that will allow the students to be informed about the latest research that has been conducted in relation to the topics delivered. Four revised modules are included as an Annex.
- Two academics with an extensive research record and experience in supervising research at the postgraduate level (both for MSc and PhD students) have been added to the faculty on a part-time basis (the CVs of Associate Professor Dr Koutsoukis and Senior Lecturer Dr Harbinja are analysed in the section 'Teaching Staff'). Importantly, Associate Professor Koutsoukis will have an upgraded role in overseeing the Research that will be conducted by the students as part of their MSc thesis. Dr Koutsoukis will deliver the relevant research module that will help the students in better preparing and conducting their research project. Furthermore, he will have a leading role in overseeing the MSc Dissertations and providing any assistance where necessary.

Application of ECTS (In response to point 1.14)

The EEC considers that the workload in the syllabus was not enough to justify 10 ECTS points for each course. Nevertheless, given the amount of time the students are expected to allocate per week in the weekly activities of the course (18 hours) and in total 270 hours, then it is reasonable to justify 10 ECTS for each course.

Admission Criteria: (In response to comment 1.20)

EIMF is adamant that the application of clear and well-defined admissions criteria and processes will ensure the quality of the students admitted to the programme. Analytically the criteria are the following:

- Bachelor's degree (or its international equivalent) from an accredited programme or other equivalent professional qualification:
 - UK Universities - degree average of 2:1 and above from UK schools
 - US Universities - 3.0 and above
 - Cypriot and Greek Universities - 6.5 and above

- Candidates with a lower grade than the above, maybe admitted if they have compensatory strengths in terms of work experience or other accomplishments.
- Proof of proficiency in English (as outline in the MSc application)
- Supportive material (Letter of Motivation, Brief CV including relevant work experience and extracurricular activities)
- Interview

In order to allay the concerns raised by the EEC, the EIMF is committed in setting a specific percentage that will not be surpassed regarding exceptional cases that do not strictly meet the criteria but are offered a place for the MSc programme based on compensatory strengths. This percentage should not surpass 15% of the total number of students accepted for the course. Additionally, the external reviewer(s) that will be appointed by the Quality Assurance Committee will specifically examine the admission criteria and process so as to secure that the criteria decided at a theoretical level are practically implemented.

Programme's Collaborations: (In response to point 1.18)

The EIMF is not yet an accredited tertiary education institution (approval is pending) and, therefore, it is difficult to formally engage in various partnerships and collaborations with other academic institutions.

Importantly, however, when the official accreditation is received, EIMF is committed in pursuing such collaborations with renowned research centres and participating in joint research initiatives that will undoubtedly bring added value not only at the academic level but also at the administrative level. Already a Letter of Intent has been agreed with the Jean Monnet Centre of Excellence of the University of Manchester, an interdisciplinary centre for the pursual of joint research projects on issues that are of direct relevance to the EIMF research interests.

Teaching Methodology: (In response to point 1.22)

Given that the MSc programme is long-distance the teaching methodology is extensively reviewed in the relevant section (Section 6) in addition to the details offered in the section 'Teaching, learning and student assessment' (Section 2)

2. Teaching, learning and student assessment (ESG 1.3)

EEC Comments:

- Findings
 - We did not receive full details of any distance learning module which has hampered the work of the EEC. The EEC questions whether they will have appropriate resources to deliver a program at Masters level.
- Strengths
 - The institution provided details of the curriculum content, including reading lists.
- Areas of improvement and recommendations
 - Recruiting somebody who has experience in Masters level teaching and research.
 - Rapidly developed detailed distance learning module material for at least one course.

Regarding the strengths of this assessment area, EIMF would like to note that the curriculum offered is considered detailed with particularly high marks (9 and 10) achieved in a number of criteria and indicators that allow for the overall average mark for this assessment area to be close to 7 (6.9 in particular).

Nevertheless, EIMF has paid particular attention to the concerns raised by the EEC and has responded accordingly in its attempt to improve the Programme and reach the necessary quality standards.

Analytically, EIMF wishes to deal in detail with comments made in the sections 'Areas of Improvement and Recommendations' and 'Findings' and address all those quality indicators/criteria that received a mark of less than 7.

Quality Indicators - Marks below 7

- (2.4) The methodology implemented in each course leads to the achievement of the course's purpose and objectives and those of the individual modules → 4
- (2.5) Constructive formative assessment for learning and feedback are regularly provided to the students → 4
- (2.7) Educational activities which encourage students' active participation in the learning process are implemented → 4
- (2.10) It is ensured that teaching and learning are continuously enriched by research → 4

- (2.11) The programme promotes students' research skills and inquiry learning → 4

Specific Comments by EEC:

- (2.1) The number of [students] should be between 15 to 20.
- (2.4) We have seen things documented but there is no evidence.
- (2.5) We have seen things documented but there is no evidence.
- (2.6) They need to clarify the distinctions. (does not make sense – we received 9 on this)
- (2.7) The teachers have not been trained yet and we have not seen evidence how they plan to do it
- (2.10) Lack of research competencies of the faculty
- (2.11) Lack of research competencies of the faculty
- (2.12) They have plans for a research training course [for students] but we remain concerned that they do not have adequate research active staff to implement them.

EIMF Reply:

Distance learning module material: (In response to comment made in sections 'findings' and 'areas of improvement and recommendations' and point 2.4 – The review of the distance learning module has been included in the previous section as well)

The Module GRC705 on Corporate Governance has been uploaded on the Classe365 learning platform. When logged in the platform one can have a picture of how the module will be delivered to the students. Login details are available in the cover letter.

Firstly, it must be noted that on the 'Resources' section the following key documents are available for the students to download:

- The complete course outline with detailed analysis of the weekly activities that will be conducted.
- 'EIMF Guideline for Student Assessment' (offers a thorough analysis on how the students will be assessed and provided with feedback - a separate section on each of the types of assessment is offered: exams, assigned essay, group work, participation in discussion forums)
- A timetable for the course (the timetable includes: when the weekly office hours will take place, when the lecture presentations will be uploaded, when the live sessions will take place, the deadlines for all assignments)

- A study pack that has at least one of the key readings for each week.

For each of the 15 weeks, the following items are available (the documents below are downloadable and can thus be accessed offline):

- Lecture Objectives
- Learning Outcomes
- Presentation
- Key literature/References
- Learning Activities

For the learning activities of each week a wide range of tools are being used to better assist the students. Indicative, the following learning tools have been uploaded on the learning platform:

- Video produced by EIMF (asynchronous) – For week 1 a video on ‘Corporate Governance’ prepared by EIMF has been uploaded. This video is indicative of the quality of videos the EIMF has produced until now. In total there more than 50 videos which amount to more than 200 hours of playing time and focus on issues of governance, risk and compliance. The following link offers the list of videos available to be used in all modules for the MSc programme (Link - https://eimf.matrixlms.com/visitor_class_catalog/category/21743)
- Relevant videos available from youtube – For weeks 3 and 4 relevant videos available on youtube are used as part of the learning activities and the students have to deal with specific questions related to these videos
- Short Quizzes – For week 3 a multiple-choice quiz is available for the students and for week 5 a ‘true or false’ quiz is available. Indicatively, one multiple choice and one true-or-false quizzes have been uploaded to allow for one to see how these quizzes operate in practice.
- Media Article – For week 2 an article from forbes.com has been uploaded. Media articles will be frequently used by the teaching instructors.
- Discussion Forum – For discussion topics have been uploaded (week 4, 6, 9, 12) where students are expected to participate and be assessed accordingly
- The first live session has been arranged for Week 1 and the relevant invitation is available on the learning platform. The synchronous live sessions will be done via ClickMeeting and then uploaded on the platform. The live sessions (synchronous communication) will be done via ClickMeeting (a webinar software already used by EIMF’s executive training instructors) and then uploaded on the platform. ClickMeeting is a invaluable e-tool that offers practical options to the presenter/instructor doing the live sessions, such as:
 - Students are invited in advance to attend the live sessions and the invitations is added to their calendars

- The presenter has the ability to:
 - See which students are online
 - Make notes on the presentation
 - Control video/audio interventions from the students
 - Record and upload the video
- Students can ask questions at any point through the presentation

Teaching Methodology (In response to points 2.4, 2.5, 2.7 and 2.11)

The teaching methodology and the relevant tools to be adopted by the teaching instructors in the delivery of the modules, secures that the module objectives are achieved and in effect the courses objectives are met. Students are required to interact and actively participate through the live sessions, discussion forums, self-assessment quizzes, videos prepared Specifically, the following learning methods are to be used:

- Presentations by Instructor: A presentation will be prepared and uploaded each week by the teaching instructor. The presentation will cover the week's thematic area and also guide the students on the learning activities.
- Reading Material: Extended academic references and bibliography are included in the course guideline. The reading material includes book chapters, journal articles and primary material (such as official reports or codes of governance). Students are expected to review at least three of the readings (including at least one item of the key readings). A special study pack is available on the learning platform and includes at least one key reading from each week/topic. More specifically those items in the reference list that have a (*) are included in the study pack. It is important to note that in the revised module outlines particular emphasis was placed in including more recent material as suggested by the EEC.
- Live Meetings (synchronous communication): There will be at least four live sessions (synchronous online meetings) for each module where the instructor will offer a summary of the key topics covered in the weekly lecture uploaded, review the learning activities students are assigned weekly and, most importantly, the students will have the chance to receive answers to questions or queries they may have. The students' active participation is not only required but based on the questions raised and the discussions that take place the quality of the live sessions will be greatly enhanced. The live sessions will be recorded and uploaded on the learning platform so that those who did not have the chance to view the session live, can view it at their own convenience.
- Videos: EIMF has a vast and continuously expanding library of video presentations on specific themes (including more than 50 videos and 200 hours of play). Such videos will continue to be produced accordingly and uploaded to assist students in gaining a better understanding on specific issues. Furthermore, based on the content of the videos, specific questions have to be answered by the students as part of their educational activities.

- Online Quizzes: Various quizzes (including multiple choice and true or false) will be prepared and uploaded by the instructor. The quizzes will allow the students to go through a self-assessment process and test their knowledge on the specific topics. Automatic feedback will be offered for each answer so that the student is able to understand the reasoning behind the correct answer.
- Recent Newspaper/Media Articles: Newspaper or Magazine articles with more recent case studies will be included on a regular basis by the instructors as part of the learning activities (with specific questions for the students to address). Such an approach offers a more practical application on the theory covered in the lectures for more recent/current issues.
- Discussion Forums (10% of final module grade): The instructor is expected to initiate a specific number of discussions in the specified forums of the platform where the participation of each student individually will be formally assessed (both the quality and the number of comments made by each student). In addition, the instructor may set up additional informal discussions and conversations covering topics included in the syllabus without these necessarily being assessed. Through the discussion forums the active participation of students is achieved while they are offered the chance to interact between them but also with the teaching instructor and be offered the relevant feedback.
- Assess Written Essay (20% of final module grade): Written essays demonstrate not only what the student knows but how well you can he/she can communicate it. The students will be expected to show an ability:
 - to understand the precise task set by the title;
 - to identify, appropriate material to read;
 - to understand and evaluate that material;
 - to select the most relevant material to refer to in your essay;
 - to construct an effective argument; and
 - to arrive at a well-supported conclusion.

The need to use such a wide range of academic skills is probably the main reason why the essay format is so popular with tutors as an assignment. The word limit adds to the challenge by requiring that all of these skills be demonstrated within a relatively small number of words.

- Group work (10% of final module grade): Group work can make study more efficient and fun. Working with others enables you to pool ideas and see problems from different perspectives. In a group situation, one can attempt tasks that could not be accomplished by an individual, combining a variety of skills and expertise to tackle more complex and larger scale problems. Group work allows analysis to a greater depth and breadth than if working individually. Furthermore, group work gives students the chance to learn from each other. There are many benefits from analysing, discussing and exploring ideas and questions as part of group that also allows for feedback from peers.

- Final Exam (60% of final module grade): It is considered an important cumulative review of both course content and applying concepts in practice that results in:
 - Revisiting concepts, approaches and terminology which allows for better overall understanding. Students benefit from a perspective containing a “bigger picture” having been exposed to the entire course.
 - Heightening retention so that knowledge gained in a course can be applied later in the workplace.
 - Students have the additional motivation to retain knowledge throughout the semester that they may not otherwise.
- Dissertation: It is undertaken with the guidance of a faculty supervisor and involves an extended period of research and writing. The intention is for the students to apply their practical skills before culmination and construct knowledge thus promoting the students’ research skills and inquiry learning. Students will be given a valuable opportunity to delve into interesting research for greater depth of learning in an area that is most relevant to them and showcase their gained writing skills, authoritative awareness of the field, and ambition to learn. Defending a thesis will also fine-tune critical communication and public speaking skills, which can be applied in any career.

Appropriate Resources to deliver a program at Masters level (In response to comment made in section ‘areas of improvement and recommendations’)

EIMF is currently an established professional/executive education centre that aims to expand and offer academic programmes and in doing so is committed in allocating/providing all the appropriate and necessary financial resources for the delivery of a programme at a Masters level. This is reflected in following areas:

- Academic staff: EIMF has gathered a well-qualified team of academics as permanent staff and has engaged key part-time academics with relevant experience in teaching and supervising students at the postgraduate level thus complementing the competencies of the permanent staff.
- External consultant: EIMF has secured that all the academic staff will go through a training course for the teaching of distance learning courses and in doing so hired has hired Professor Angeli who is considered to be a national expert on distance learning. Furthermore, external academics will be contracted by the Quality Assurance Committee as external reviewers to carry out the necessary quality checks.
- Research: EIMF is committed in investing in research activities and has already assigned as a specific amount to be allocated on research activities (see comments in introductory section).

- Infrastructure: EIMF has state-of-art facilities and intends to provide the equal level of services to the distance-learning students through the learning platform offered, the various electronic teaching tools, access to electronic references (e-library) and the support of administrative staff.

Recruiting somebody who has experience in Masters level teaching and research (In response to comment made in section 'areas of improvement and recommendations' and point 2.10)

EIMF has taken into consideration the comments made by the EEC that at EIMF we 'do not have adequate research active staff' in order to 'implement plans for a research training course'. For this reason, EIMF has reached an agreement with Dr Nikitas-Spiros Koutsoukis (Associate Professor at the University of Peloponnese) who will be in charge of the research training course that will be offered to students as part of their preparation for their MSc thesis. Dr Koutsoukis has relevant experience in teaching 'research methods' to postgraduate students and supervising both MSc and PhD students. With the addition of Dr Koutsoukis in the academic team and his role in leading/coordinating the MSc-related research activities, the teaching staff at EIMF will be able to better implement a research-oriented MSc programme.

In addition, Dr Edina Harbinja (Senior Lecturer) has been added to the academic staff on a part-time status. Dr Harbinja has experience in both teaching and supervising MSc and PhD students while she also an active research scholar, having a wide list of publications that will be used to the benefit of the programme.

The addition of these two academics greatly strengthens the overall capacity of the EIMF academic team and ensures that the students' research skills and inquiry learning is effectively promoted under the guidance of academics which have relevant experience in supervision and monitoring graduate research students. In addition, given that there is commitment by all staff members to continue to pursue academic research, this will be used to enrich all teaching and learning activities.

Further details on the teaching staff will be offered in section 3 'Teaching Staff' which is considered a more relevant section to expand on this point further.

Formative Assessment and Feedback (In response to point 2.5)

As part of the MSc programme there is a clear intention to provide students with constructive feedback that will allow them to improve their performance while at the same time the students are made aware of how each of their assessments will be formally assessed through the 'Guideline for Student Assessment'. At this point in time and given that the EIMF is not yet an accredited tertiary education institutions that is running academic programmes, it is not possible to provide evidence of how this policy is implemented.

The 'Guideline for Student Assessment' is a comprehensive document that provides the student with a analytical framework on how his/her assignments are to be marked and feedback forms that are to be completed by the teaching staff.

Additionally, the following points need to be highlighted:

- Feedback will be offered by the teaching instructor through the discussion forums where students are required to participate and there will be continuous interaction between the teaching instructor and the students.
- There will be two formal meetings per semester between the student and his/her Mentor and, in addition, upon the student's request, meetings can be arranged with the Programme Coordinator to discuss the learning progress and performance of the student, any issues that may have been encountered and how to improve future performance.
- There will be live sessions (a minimum of four for each course) where the instructor will offer a review of the weekly topics and discuss the learning activities with the students, offering them a chance to gain valuable feedback on the activities they should have completed.
- All teaching instructors are required to have weekly office hours so that the students may have synchronous meetings where they will be able to discuss any issues in relation with the course and receive direct feedback and answers.
- Communication via email: Teaching instructors should respond swiftly to the students' emails, wherever possible within 2 working days.
- The Online quizzes offer feedback for each question and thus students have the chance to see the reasoning behind each answer and where they did wrong.

It is important to note that for EIMF feedback is important not only in one direction (teaching instructors to students) but it is a two-way process. In other words, students are required to offer their feedback in relation to their teaching and learning experience and this feedback will be utilised in order to improve the quality of services offered by EIMF. For instance, it is important to note that in the mandate of the Quality Assurance Committee there is the following reference: 'In assessing the quality of the programmes offered, the Quality Assurance Committee will examine how the feedback received from students was appropriately incorporated in the relevant programmes'

More specifically, at the end of each semester the students will be required to anonymously complete a questionnaire form where they will provide feedback for the future improvement of the modules offered. An official feedback form will be available for each course and the students will be required to complete and submit the form in order to obtain access to their course grades.

The student evaluation will focus on the following on the following thematic areas: Module Content and Organisation, Learning Environment and Teaching Methods, Learning Resources, Faculty Evaluation and Technology and Platform Evaluation. Apart from closed questions there are also “Comments” sections where the students can freely express their feelings and thoughts about the course and give the appropriate feedback.

The student will complete and submit the form in a specified period (between the last week of the course and before the exam period). The feedback forms will be sent to the School Registrar that will conduct a report and deliver it to the Academic Director so that the necessary steps are taken in order to improve the final product offered to the students. Importantly, the Quality Assurance Committee will review how the feedback forms are handled by the Academic Director in order to secure that these are taken into consideration in a productive and efficient manner.

Feedback Evaluation For – Student Module Evaluation Form:

Five options will be given for each of the points raised in the feedback form:

- Strongly Disagree
- Disagree
- Uncertain
- Agree
- Strongly Agree

Students will be encouraged to include their comments in the feedback form

Module Content and Organisation

1. The Study Guide included the weekly learning objectives and relevant material
2. The Study Guide clearly and comprehensively directed the student’s learning experience
3. The module workload manageable
4. The material was presented in a manner that kept the students engaged
5. The module did not omit to include any relevant material that should have been addressed

Comments:

Learning Environment and Teaching Methods

6. The module involved a wide range of interactive learning tools
7. The module was well structured to achieve the learning outcomes
8. Discussion fora were available for the students to interact
9. The learning and teaching methods encouraged students' participation

Comments:

Learning Resources

10. The recommended reading material were relevant and appropriate
11. The provision of learning resources on the Web was adequate and appropriate
12. The provision of e-resources and material was adequate.
13. Accessing library e-resources was easy and convenient.
14. Remote (off-campus) access to library e-resources was available at all times
15. There was adequate support on how to use the library e-resources (instructions and guidelines).

Comments:

Faculty Evaluation

16. The lecturer was responsive to student needs and problems
17. The lecturer was regular in delivering the course
18. The lecturer provided constructive feedback to assessments.
19. The lecturer set convenient online office hours
20. The lecturer was available for direct communication (outside office hours) when required

Comments:

Technology and Platform Evaluation

21. The electronic learning platform (ELP) was user friendly
22. There was adequate support on how to use the ELP
23. The platform was running uninterrupted

24. Contact with the Distance Learning Unit (DLU) was efficient and timely

Comments:

Student Active Participation (In response to point 2.7)

As part of the teaching methodology and the learning tools, EIMF has secured that there are educational activities which encourage students' active participation. More precisely:

- Live sessions - There will be live sessions (a minimum of four for each course) where the instructor will offer a review of the weekly topics and discuss the learning activities with the students offering them a chance to gain valuable feedback on the activities they should have completed. These sessions rely on the active participation of students
- Discussion Forums – The teaching instructor will moderate discussion boards and provide his/her input as required in order to secure that students actively participate in the discussions taking place.
- Online Quizzes: Various quizzes (including multiple choice and true or false) will be prepared and uploaded by the instructor. The students will participate in these activities by completing the quiz at their own time. The quizzes will allow the students to go through a self-assessment process and test their knowledge on the specific topics. Automatic feedback will be offered for each answer so that the student is able to understand the reasoning behind the correct answer.
- The students have three assessed assignments/exercises to be completed (in addition to the final exam), including an essay, group presentation and participation in online discussions. Through the completion of this formally assessed assignments (instead of merely having an end-of-year exam), the participation of the student throughout the duration of the course is better achieved.

Number of Students in each Group (in response to comment 2.1)

EIMF confirms that the number of students in each group shall not exceed 20

3. Teaching Staff (ESG 1.5)

In addition to your response to EEA's comments on the teaching staff:

- a. fill in TABLE 1: TEACHING STAFF at the end of this form and
- b. send the curriculum vitae of all the program lecturers on the forms posted on the Agency's website as an annex. (Form 500.1.03 for Universities and Form 500.1.04 for Higher Education Institutes)

EEC Comments:

- Findings
 - No full-time academic staff currently employed by the institution.
 - There is a plan to recruit 6 full-time academic staff, by this is not supported by the financial projections of the feasibility study.
 - The academic staff the institution intends to recruit do not have the range of skills or expertise expected for Masters level delivery in terms of teaching experience and research output.
- Strengths
 - Some of the staff are exceptionally well-linked to the financial services of Cyprus. The indications are that the program offered by the institute is well regarded by clients.
- Areas of improvement and recommendations
 - Recruiting people who have experience in Masters level teaching and research

Regarding the strengths of this assessment area, EIMF would like to note that despite scoring 9 marks in certain areas the overall average mark is the lowest in all assessment areas (5.5) and for this reason EIMF has made significant changes in order to accommodate the concerns raised by the EEC and build a coherent and solid academic staff team that will deliver high quality results.

Analytically, EIMF wishes to deal with comments in the section 'Areas of Improvement and Recommendations' and 'Findings' and address all those quality indicators/criteria that received a mark less than 7.

Quality Indicators: Marks below 7

- (3.1) The number of full-time teaching staff, occupied exclusively at the institution, and their fields of expertise, adequately support the programme of study → 4
- (3.2) The members of teaching staff for each course have the relevant formal and fundamental qualifications for teaching the course, including the following:
 - (3.2.2) Research and Publications within the discipline → 1
 - (3.2.3) Experience / training in teaching in higher education → 4
- (3.3) The programme attracts visiting professors of recognized academic standing → 4
- (3.8) The teaching load allows for the conduct of research and contribution to society → 4
- (3.10) The results of the teaching staff's research activity are published in international journals with the peer-reviewing system, in international conferences, conference minutes, publications etc → 1

Specific Comments by EEC:

- (3.1) Currently they do not have full-time academic staff. The staff has no or limited experience of teaching the courses.
- (3.2) The projected staff includes people who have no or limited experience in higher education. Few faculty members are specialized in the subjects that they are supposed to teach. There is extremely limited evidence of research activity and even more limited evidence of outputs.
- (3.3) They attract visiting professors that are predominantly practitioners.
- (3.4) We didn't see sufficient evidence within the CVs and could not find evidence on the web that support that the visiting professors have adequate teaching experience.
- (3.6) Fifty percent of the indicated staff will be part time, but this also assumes that the recruitment plans are fulfilled. Given the financial position of the institution we don't believe that the target of recruiting 6 full time staff is realistic and as a result the proportion of part time teachers will become even higher.
- (3.8) The institution did not provide evidence regarding what the teaching load will be.
- (3.9) The coordinator has no experience of coordination and has not worked full time in an academic institution. In addition, his areas of interest do not converge with the Masters program's requirements.

- (3.10) There is extremely limited evidence of research activity and even more limited evidence of outputs.
- (3.11) We were not provided with sufficient detail on the training program.

EIMF Reply:

Academic Staff (In response to comment made in section ‘findings’ and ‘areas of improvement and recommendations’ and point 3.1, 3.2, 3.3, 3.4, 3.6)

Following the review of EEC and the relevant concerns raised about the number of academics EIMF intends to employ (the EEC mentioned that EIMF will not be able to support the number of academics it presented) and the relevance of some academics to the courses taught, there has been a rearrangement of the academic team.

Though EIMF has not yet been granted approval to operate as a Higher Education Institute it has employed two academics on a FT basis (Academic Director Dr Adonis Pegasiou and Dr Stelios Platis) and has a pre-agreement in place with Dr Pantelitsa Sfiniadaki that will be activated once the accreditation process is successfully completed.

In addition, since the day of the EEC Review, the EIMF has taken the relevant steps in order to engage two academics on a part-time basis that will bring added value to the course, given the relevance their fields of expertise have with the courses they have been assigned, their proven research track record, their experience in teaching and supervising MSc and PhD students and, in the case of one, significant experience in long-distance teaching. The two academics will be teaching two out of the eight modules (i.e. 25% of the teaching will be delivered by the part-time staff).

The revised list of academics and the assigned modules are outlined below:

Code	Course title	Academic
GRC700	The Financial System: International Regulatory Framework (core)	Dr. Pantelitsa Sfiniadaki (FT)
GRC705	Corporate Governance (core)	Dr. Adonis Pegasiou (FT)
GRC715	Risk Management (core)	Dr. Nikitas-Spyros Koutsoukis (PT)
GRC710	Compliance Regulation (core)	Dr. Pantelitsa Sfiniadaki (FT)
GRC730	Leadership and Strategy in Regulated Industries (elective)	Dr. Stelios Platis (FT)

GRC735	Business Skills – Communication, Negotiation, Critical Thinking, Emotional Intelligence(elective)	Dr. Stelios Platis (FT)
GRC745	Emerging Technologies and the Law (elective)	Dr. Edina Harbinja
GRC740	Business Ethics and Corporate Social Responsibility (elective)	Dr. Adonis Pegasiou (FT)
	Research Training Module	Dr. Nikitas-Spyros Koutsoukis (PT)

Analytically, the academic team is compromised of the following:

Adonis Pegasiou (Programme Coordinator – Full Time) (additionally in response to comment 3.9)

The Coordinator was a full-time Research Associate at the EUC Research Centre in Cyprus after being awarded a Post-Doctoral Fund by the Research Promotions Foundation of the Republic of Cyprus. The successful delivery of the outputs of such a research fund requires both management and coordination skills. In addition, he has served in high ranked professional positions (e.g. Board Director in one of the local systemic banks and an airline) that require coordination, management and leadership skills. These management skills are essential in fulfilling his tasks as Programme Coordinator.

Teaching experience: Dr Pegasiou has taught in the UK (Seminar Convenor at the University of Manchester) and in Cyprus, as a guest lecturer at the European University Cyprus (EUC) for number of years and for the past five years at the University of Cyprus (Adjunct Lecturer) where he had the responsibility for the preparation and delivery of 8 different modules. This year, prior to taking up his role as Academic Director at EIMF he was selected by the University of Cyprus to teach postgraduate modules in addition to undergraduate courses, but due to his appointment as Academic Director he had to decline the offer. As part of his cooperation with the EIMF, he has taught executive education courses that relate to Corporate Governance, Business Ethics and International Economic Sanctions.

Besides his publications (including top-ranked academic journals), the EIMF Academic Director has pending research publications (work that has already been presented in international conferences) relating to the Rescue Packages offered in Eurozone countries and Central Bank Independence. Dr Pegasiou has also acted as a reviewer for the Journals Mediterranean Politics and Journal of South European Society and Politics.

Furthermore, he has acquired knowledge and practical experience in issues of Corporate Governance, Risk, Regulation and Compliance that have equipped him adequately, in order to expand his research activities in these fields, something he is committed in doing. Both the practical experience from his participation in boards of significant corporations and the completion (with Merit) of a Diploma in Governance, Risk and Compliance from the International Compliance Association are invaluable assets in the new academic role he has undertaken and the teaching of the modules ‘Corporate Governance’ and ‘Business Ethics’.

Stelios Platis (Full-Time)

Dr Stelios Platis is an economist, with a PhD from the Faculty of Economics and Politics of the University of Cambridge. In 2005 he founded and directed up until 2015, the internationally-awarded regulatory consulting Group, MAP S.Platis, providing risk management, internal audit and compliance support services to the EU financial services sector. In 2015, Dr. Platis has taken up the position of Chairman of the MAP S.Platis Group and MAP FinTech – the financial technology subsidiary of the Group, as well as of the executive education and professional studies Institute, the European Institute of Management and Finance (EIMF), while since 2009 he has been the Chairman of the Association of Cyprus International Investment Firms (ACIIF).

Teaching experience: Following the completion of his postgraduate studies Dr Platis worked as an Assistant Lecturer/Research at the London Business School, teaching Financial Accounting for postgraduate students of the MSc Finance Programme and helping co-supervise their dissertations. Later, Dr Platis became a full-time academic at the Cyprus International Institute of Management (CIIM) (2003-2005), teaching postgraduate courses for the MBA Programme including ‘Financial Engineering’, ‘Risk Management’ and ‘Business Strategy and Leadership’ and, also, serving as the Director of RiskLab (Cyprus) in association with the University of Cyprus . During his time at the CIIM he either supervised or co-supervised more than 30 MBA Dissertations. At the same time, he was an associate of the Department of Applied Economics of the University of Cambridge. Following his departure from CIIM, Dr Platis has continued to teach on a part-time basis and, given his extensive professional experience and academic background, he has also delivered executive training courses at the EIMF including ‘Risk Management’, ‘Business Skills’ (with emphasis on Negotiation and Communication skills) and ‘Strategic Leadership’.

Importantly, he has undertaken important research and managed to publish in reputable journals such as ‘Economica’ (Higson, C., Holly, S., Kattuman, P., & Platis, S. (2004). The business cycle, macroeconomic shocks and the cross-section: the growth of UK quoted companies. Economica, 71(282), 299-318. (Link)).

Currently, Dr Platis aims to return to academia and take over a permanent role in EIMF. He will thus be teaching the courses ‘Leadership and Strategy in Regulated Industries’ and ‘Business Skills – Communication, Negotiation, Critical Thinking, Emotional Intelligence’ and assisting in the supervision of MSc theses, while also helping with executive education programmes. His professional and academic background more than adequately equip him to take over this role.

Pantelitsa Sfiniadaki (Full-time upon receiving relevant accreditation)

Dr Pantelitsa Sfiniadaki holds a Law Degree from the Law School of the University of Athens, a Master of Law degree (L.LM.) from the Freie Universität of Berlin and a PhD in Public Law from the same University. She was awarded with the Academy of Athens, Ph.D.

Scholarship for research in the fields of Public Law and Vardinogiannio Idrima, for a Master Scholarship.

Since 2017 she has been a scientific collaborator and teaching personnel at the European University of Cyprus. She taught the Courses of 'Oil and Gas Law' and 'Environmental Aspects of Oil and Gas Law' (undergraduate level) at the School of Business Administration. The Course of Oil and Gas Law included among others the Law of Competition and its impacts on the energy sector, whereas the Course of Environmental Aspects of Oil and Gas Law focused on the risks of non-compliance with the environmental regulations, on the environmental liability under International and European Law, on the impacts of the principle of the sustainable development on the energy sector and on the emergence of the green energy and green economy. In addition, she has taught the Course 'Special Administrative Law' (undergraduate level) and 'General Administrative Law at the Law School of the European University of Cyprus' (undergraduate level). For the current academic year, Dr Sfiniadaki has been asked by the European University Cyprus to participate in the assessment process of the MSc dissertations.

Her overall research interests focus on the principle of the sustainable development and on the legalisation of Corporate Social Responsibility. Her Ph.D. analysed the conflicts and interconnections between the three pillars of the sustainable development (economy, environment, society) and investigated the strategies to its normativity and effective implementation in the urban planning law. She has been invited to present in various conference on the relationship between the Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR) and Law against the backdrop of the environmental protection and the application of the Polluter Pays principle in the European context. Additionally, she has participated as a law expert in the Get-Up Erasmus + project of the European University of Cyprus regarding the European regulatory framework for the green economy.

Taking into consideration the causes and impacts of the ecological and economic crises, her future research interests include the internationalisation and europeanisation of the Environmental and Economic Law, in order to achieve sustainability from an environmental and financial scope. She intends to focus on the impacts of the regulatory intervention for the environmental protection on the financial sector, on the European framework for the promotion of the green economy, and on the concept of sustainable banking. Given her academic background, teaching experience and potential, Dr Sfiniadaki is considered competent to successfully deliver the two courses on the international regulatory system of the financial system and compliance regulation while also working on joint research projects with the other academics of EIMF, given that their interests and backgrounds complement each other.

Nikitas-Spiros Koutsoukis (Part-Time) (New Addition)

Dr Nikitas-Spiros Koutsoukis is one of the two additions of academics that will join the EIMF team on a part-time basis. He is an Associate Professor in Decision Modelling and Information Systems in the Department of Political Science and International Relations, University of Peloponnese. He has also taught at the Hellenic Open University since 2002 and since 2007 is an adjunct lecturer in the Business Administration (MBA) program.

Furthermore, he has taught the long-distance course Enterprise Risk Management at the Open University of Cyprus.

Dr. Koutsoukis received his MSc (1994) and PhD (1998) from the department of Mathematics and Statistics at Brunel University (UK). During 2005-2009 he was an Assistant Professor at the department of International Economic Relations and Development, Democritus University (Greece). Before that he was a lecturer at the department of Mathematics and Statistics, Brunel University (1999-2002) and has also taught undergraduate and postgraduate courses the department of Operational Research London School of Economics (LSE). His teaching experience therefore covers both postgraduate modules and long-distance teaching. Additionally, Dr Koutsoukis has extensive experience in supervising postgraduate students. Currently he has five PhD students, while, overall, he has participated in several three-member review committees for PhD students and he has also supervised and assessed a great number of postgraduate and undergraduate theses.

His research interests are multidisciplinary and constantly evolving; his more recent projects tend to focus in topics related to Analytics, Risk Management, Information Systems and their applications to public Governance.

Dr Koutsoukis will be delivering the course Risk Management and the research training course that is part of the thesis that will be prepared by the students. In light of his teaching experience and research record, Dr Koutsoukis is more than competent to carry out this task and bring added value to the academic team of EIMF.

Edina Harbinja (Part-Time) (New Addition)

Dr Harbinja is a Senior Lecturer at Aston Business School (Birmingham, UK) since 2018. She has a PhD and LL.M from the University of Strathclyde and an LL.B from the University of Sarajevo.

Dr Harbinja's principal areas of research and teaching are related to the legal issues surrounding the Internet and emerging technologies. Edina is a pioneer and a globally recognised expert in post-mortem privacy, i.e. privacy of the deceased individuals. Her research has a policy and multidisciplinary focus and aims to explore different options of regulation of online behaviours and phenomena, including privacy and data protection, IP, contract law, property and succession. She has published widely on aspects of internet law and regulation, and has been a visiting scholar and invited speaker to universities and conferences in the USA, Latin America and Europe. Her research has been highly impactful and has been cited by legislators, courts and policymakers in the US, Australia and Europe. Edina also regularly engages with the media, and her key appearances include the BBC Tomorrow's World, BBC Ideas, ABC, The Law Society Gazette, The Legal Practice Management Magazine etc.

Dr Harbinja holds a number of appointments and memberships outside Aston. This includes, inter alia, membership of the Advisory Council at Open Rights Group, Senior Fellowship of the Higher Education Academy, membership of the Executive Committee,

British and Irish Law, Education and Technology Association (BILETA). Edina is also an alumna of the Leadership Foundation's Aurora programme and the UK Digital Economy Ambassador, as a part of the CHERISH-DE Digital Economy Crucible Programme, Swansea University. She is a peer reviewer for a number of IT law journals. Edina is one of the chief editors of the EUP book series 'Future Law', and has been invited to guest edit two journals in the area of technology and law so far.

Dr Harbinja will be teaching the elective course 'Emerging Technologies and Law'.

Research Publications (In response to comments in section 'findings' and comments 3.10)

The publications of the academic staff are included in the CVs attached. Notably the publications of the new academics reflect that they are active researchers, with research outputs that are relevant to the modules they will be teaching.

Value Added by Guest/PT Academics (In response to comments in section 'areas of improvement and recommendations' and comments 3.2.2, 3.2.3, 3.3 and 3.10)

The academics joining the EIMF on a part-time basis are established researchers with postgraduate teaching experience (reviewed above) that will undoubtedly bring added value to the team of EIMF academics and positively contribute in the delivery of the MSc programme. The comment of EEC that EIMF attracts visiting professors that are predominantly practitioners and that there was no sufficient evidence within the CVs or evidence easily available on the web that support that the visiting professors have adequate teaching experience, have both been adequately addressed with the addition of Dr Koutsoukis and Dr Harbinja. Both of the recruited part-time academics have experience in Masters level teaching, research and supervision of research at the postgraduate level, as requested by the EEC.

Teaching Load (In response to comment 3.8)

The teaching load of the academic staff will be at most three modules per semester which amounts to six modules per year. The decision on the working load has been based on practices followed by other academic institutions in Cyprus and the UK. This arrangement allows the academic staff adequate time to pursue their research and also contribute to society. Given any extra administrative duties, participation in research projects and other activities that may add excessive workload, the teaching load will be adjusted accordingly.

It is important to note that EIMF is connected with society and expects staff to do so as well. This can be done through public lectures, already taking place as the 'EIMF talks', which are open to the public and deal with topical issues and roundtable discussions that seek the engagement of society at large. Additionally, EIMF has already a record of participation in projects that have a positive impact on society at large such as the Public Sector Governance Code (EIMF has actively participated and supported for the past four years the National Governance Team in the preparation and publication of the Cyprus Public Sector Governance Code), free training events in partnership with other organizations (e.g. ACAMS Cyprus Chapter and CIFA (Cyprus Investment Funds Association) as well as other relevant activities.

Training Programme (In response to comment 3.11)

Thought initially the MSc Programme was planned to be offered in the academic year 2019-2020, the intention is now to offer the course for the year 2020-21, taking into account the consideration of the EEC that a one year delay will benefit EIMF and essentially allow it to be better prepared for the delivery of the course. Within this year and as part of better preparing for the MSc programme, the EIMF has planned to offer a training programme ('How to teach online') for its academic staff (permanent and part-time) that will finish prior to the commencement of the MSc Programme.

The programme 'How to teach online' is designed and delivered by an established academic in the field of distance learning, Professor Charoula Angeli that has been contracted by EIMF to assist in the development of its Distance Learning Unit.

The overall aims of Professor Angeli is to introduce:

- Relevant delivery modes based on a variety of pedagogical methods
- Innovative and diverse teaching methods, learning environments and learning aids
- Educational activities that encourage students' active participation

Through its instructional design the course aims to secure the following for each module:

1. Learner's active engagement with the content.
2. Learner's interactions with the Course Instructor.
3. Learner's online collaboration with others in the course.
4. Co-creation of learning artifacts.
5. Universal learning design so that continuous online guidance and support (scaffolding) can be provided to learners having different readiness levels, needs, and difficulties.
6. Ongoing formative online assessments.
7. Peer, Expert, and Self-assessment.
8. Learning analytic

Overall the course will secure:

- How to organize the course content in weekly modules
- How to set clear objectives and expectations for each week
- Design of online learning activities (individual/group)
- Student evaluation (quizzes, group projects, case studies, etc.)
- Assessment rubrics/types of feedback
- Asynchronous and synchronous communication
- Course facilitation

Having completed the course, the teaching instructors will be in a much better position to deliver their courses while, even more, they will have the option of contacting Professor Angeli during the semester if they have any particular issues they want to resolve. This will have a direct positive effect on the learning experience of the students.

Additionally, all academic staff will have the chance to attend any of the executive/professional seminars that take place at the EIMF and be informed by practitioners about the latest developments in the fields of Governance, Risk and Compliance. This is a unique opportunity for the EIMF academics and a result of EIMF's successful executive/professional training centre.

4. Students (ESG 1.4, 1.6, 1.7)

EEC Comments:

- Findings
 - The EEC had difficulties in the evaluation of the students since the program hasn't started. The EEC is concerned that the intended admissions criteria will not be executed, and a significant number of exceptions may be allowed. The marketing strategy has not identified and addressed the right targets.
- Strengths
 - Because of the size of the institution, the communication between the staff and the students will be relatively easy. Their ambition to recruit excellent students is noticeable.
- Areas of improvement and recommendations
 - Ensuring the admissions criteria are applied. Establish the governance procedure to ensure that the registrar can apply the admissions criteria. An independent assessor of the admissions procedure could help in this procedure.
 - The institution has to clarify its processes and procedures to make the program flexible and adaptable for disabled students.

Regarding the strengths of this assessment area, EIMF would like to note the EEC positive comment on the successful communication channel that will enhance the students' experience, while also the declared ambition to recruit excellent students. Overall, the average mark awarded is 6.5 while for certain criteria EIMF performs remarkably well.

Nevertheless, there are key issues raised by the EEC and the EIMF has put great effort in dealing with these, in its attempt to improve the Programme and reach the necessary quality standards.

Analytically, EIMF wishes to deal with comments in the sections 'Areas of Improvement and Recommendations' and 'Findings' and address all those quality indicators/criteria that received a mark less than 7. Specifically, regarding the 'marketing strategy' mentioned in the section 'findings' this was reviewed in Section 1.

Quality Indicators:

Marks below 7

- (4.2) The award of the higher education qualification is accompanied by the diploma supplement which is in line with European and international standards → 4 (?)
- (4.7) Mentoring of each student is provided and the number of students per each permanent teaching member is adequate → 6
- (4.8) Flexible options / adaptable to the personal needs or to the needs of students with special needs, are provided → 4

Specific Comments by EEC:

- (4.1) The standard requirements are perfectly acceptable, but the EEC has concerns that there may be a big number of exceptions.
- (4.2) There was no documentation to answer this. (?)
- (4.5) There should be an independent assessor in case of a complaint.
- (4.7) There is an inadequate number of people with university experience that understand the full demand of a mentoring process for students.
- (4.8) We didn't receive sufficient evidence that they have policies in place to make the program adaptable.

EIMF Reply:

Admission Criteria: (In response to comment made in section 'findings' and 'areas of improvement and recommendations' and points 4.1 and 4.5)

EIMF is adamant that the application of clear and well-defined admissions criteria and processes will ensure the quality of the students admitted to the programme. Analytically the criteria are the following:

- Bachelor's degree (or its international equivalent) from an accredited programme or other equivalent professional qualification:
 - UK Universities - degree average of 2:1 and above from UK schools
 - US Universities - 3.0 and above
 - Cypriot and Greek Universities - 6.5 and above
 - Candidates with a lower grade than the above, maybe admitted if they have compensatory strengths in terms of work experience or other accomplishments.

- Proof of proficiency in English (as outline in the MSc application)
- Supportive material (Letter of Motivation, Brief CV including relevant work experience and extracurricular activities)
- Interview

In order to allay the concerns raised by the EEC, the EIMF is committed in setting a specific percentage that will not be surpassed regarding exceptional cases that do not strictly meet the criteria but are offered a place for the MSc programme based on compensatory strengths. Explicitly, this percentage should not surpass 15% of the total number of students accepted for the course. Additionally, the external reviewer(s) that will be appointed by the Quality Assurance Committee will specifically examine the admission criteria and process, so as to secure that the criteria decided at a theoretical level are practically implemented. The independent reviewer will also be mandated to look at any cases of complaint regarding the admission procedure of EIMF.

Disabled Students: (In response to comment made in section ‘areas of improvement and recommendations’ and point 4.8)

Regarding students with disabilities, EIMF wants to reiterate its commitment to aid students that require special assistance in order for them to be able to complete the MSc programme (given that they meet the admission requirements set).

More specifically, the EIMF has decided to follow the policy adopted by the state-owned Open University of Cyprus regarding persons with disabilities. The Open University of Cyprus makes reference to the relevant legislation “Persons with Disabilities Law of 2000” (no. 127/2000), where “disability” regarding a person is defined as any form of insufficiency or impairment causing a permanent or temporally undefined physical, intellectual or mental constraint to a person and given also this person’s medical history and other personal data also decreases or eliminates the possibility of carrying out one or more activities considered as normal and essential to the quality of life of every person of the same age who does not have any such insufficiency or impairment.

In handling such cases, EIMF’s policy will, therefore, be to offer certain additional places for students with disabilities who have the minimum admission requirements for the Programme. Students will be therefore instructed to include any sort of disability they may face in their application and what sort of assistance they will require in order to be able to complete their studies. On a case-by-case basis EIMF assures, as much as possible, the necessary structure, support and conditions that allow and facilitate their studies will be offered (e.g. in relation to exam arrangement, assignment preparation and submission, exam preparation, etc.)

Students' Mentoring: (In response to point 4.7)

Upon admission to the Institution, each student has his/her own Academic Mentor (who has the role of a tutor and advisor). Through this, the Institution will offer continuing individual academic support for all students with the ultimate goal of successful completion of their studies. The mentor will monitor the progress of the student on a systematic basis, always aiming at providing any assistance when circumstances require it. Also, with the student's consent, academic instructors may be informed of any relevant issues faced.

Overall key duties of the Academic Mentor are to:

- Make initial contact with their mentees to arrange the dates and times of proposed mentor sessions.
- Provide advice and support in matters related to the academic progress and personal development of the students
- Discuss academic progress, assessment and examinations.
- Should follow up cases that do not attend meetings and/or perform poorly in their modules.
- Familiarise themselves with sources of specialist advice and support from University central services (e.g. Welfare office, Distance-Learning Unit)
- Recognise their own limitations and, in cases of doubt, should seek to refer students to specialist sources of advice and support.

Not more than 15 MSc students will be allocated to each member of staff.

Students Welfare and Counselling services (in response to comment 4.8)

Counselling services come under the Student Welfare Office. The goal is the short term and long-term counselling support to help students identify and handle difficulties relating to their academic, professional and even family environment. Interpersonal and intimate relationships, identity formation, family affairs, losses and separations, social impact on others, adjustment to the new environment are some of the major concerns that students may face during their time of study.

EIMF aims to offer support to its students when facing such difficulties through counselling and psychological support services that are managed by EIMF associate Ms Lefki Angelis who will be available via email and skype for all long-distance students. Ms Angelis is a former social worker and practitioner in psychology and, as such, with a strong understanding of human behaviour and significant experience in offering counselling services.

Career office

The Career Office is one of the two units (in addition to the Office of Counselling) that form the Student Welfare Service. It is the duty of this Office to inform students through the various communication channels available at the EIMF (emails, learning platform, etc) about events and seminars, job opportunities and other career prospects in the public as well as in the private sector. Importantly, EIMF aims at promoting its students in the European and international area through cooperating with business corporations abroad and other European and International higher education Institutions.

Regarding point 4.2 (The award of the higher education qualification is accompanied by the diploma supplement which is in line with European and international standards) it is not clear what EIMF is expected to do and why it has received a mark of 4.

5. Resources (ESG 1.6)

EEC Comments:

- Findings
 - For a distance learning program, the EEC were surprised that there was so little evidence of the availability of electronic journals and books, despite repeated requests. The reading lists also included a significant number of textbooks and there appeared to be no preparation to make these easily accessible to distance learning students.
- Strengths
 - They have competent administrative staff. The platform supports communication between students and teachers as well as communication between students.
- Areas of improvement and recommendations
 - They need to invest further in staff capable of underpinning a distance learning programme.
 - Concerns have been identified above that the institution has inadequate academic staff with distance learning experience and therefore needs to recruit appropriately qualified staff.

Regarding the strengths of this assessment area, EIMF would like to highlight the competence of the administrative staff that was acknowledged by the EEC and the high marks achieved in relation to the infrastructure of EIMF, the platform for internal communication, the use of suitable journals and books and equipment used for e-learning. Overall, the average mark attained for this section is comfortably above 7 (in particular 7.4).

Nevertheless, the EIMF wishes to highlight how key concerns of the EEC have been addressed in a way that will upgrade the quality of the MSc offered.

Analytically, EIMF wishes to deal with Areas of Improvement and Recommendations and address all those quality indicators/criteria that received a mark less than 7.

Quality Indicators:

Marks below 7

- (5.2) The library includes the latest books and material that support the programme → 4
- (5.6) Statutory administrative mechanisms for monitoring and supporting students are sufficient → 4

Specific Comments by EEC:

- (5.2) We were not able to investigate the amount of books and journals (online sources) that are electronically available for the students.
- (5.5) There is a student welfare officer at the moment and there is a plan to provide increased results but we saw insufficient detail.
- (5.6) No statutory mechanisms were provided.
- (5.10) The university failed to provide us with the list of available journals

EIMF Reply:

Electronic Library and E-resources (In response to comment made in section ‘findings’ and points 5.2 and 5.10)

On the day of the Review, the EEC was reassured that they will receive the full list of online sources in due time. An email was sent the following day (Thursday 20/6/2019 at 22:40, to: Ms Prokopa Education Officer at CYQAA mprokopa@schools.ac.cy) providing a complete list of the Journal Articles that will be available electronically via our Library according to the agreement that has been reached with InterOPTICS S.A (<http://www.interoptics.gr/>) and will be activated upon EIMF’s accreditation. InterOPTICS S.A. is an ISO-certified Greek company with commercial activities in the scientific information subscriptions market, specifically: (1) Scientific and professional electronic databases and (2) Print and electronic scientific journals and books

Unfortunately, Ms Prokopa informed us that the EIMF email was sent only after the EEC had completed its report and, therefore, EIMF did not take it into consideration before finalising its comments. The complete list of the Journal Articles that is available electronically via our Library is attached as an annex to EIMF’s reply. Additionally, in the complete module (GRC 705) that has been prepared and uploaded to the learning platform, a study pack has been prepared that includes at least one key reading from each week’s presentation. Such a study pack will be prepared for each module and is particularly helpful for the students..

Overall, EIMF aims to provide an electronic copy of the core text for each module, although students will be made aware that the availability of books in electronic form is subject to publishers' permissions (often is the case that such permission is not provided). In the event that a core textbook cannot be provided in e-book format, suitable alternatives may be available. There are occasions when students may wish to purchase a copy of a core textbook, in the event that it is not available in library. In all cases, a range of e-books will be made available to facilitate a wider and thorough reading around a particular topic.

Staff with DL experience (In response to comment made in section 'recommendations and findings')

The EEC raised again the issue that 'the institution has inadequate academic staff with distance learning experience and therefore needs to recruit appropriately qualified staff'. As mentioned previously, EIMF has taken into consideration the concern of the EEC and this has been reflected in the choice of the two part-time academics that will be contracted since one of the them has long experience in distance learning teaching.

Nevertheless, given the importance EIMF places on the quality of distance learning teaching to be offered, Professor Angeli has been contracted to train the academic staff of EIMF and adequately prepare them for the delivery of their modules online. The time available prior to the commencement of the next academic year (October 2020) is ample to secure the readiness of EIMF and its academic to run the programme online.

Students Welfare and Counselling services (in response to comment 5.5)

The concerns of the EEC were addressed in the previous section (section 4: 'Students') but are repeated here in response to comment 5.5)

Counselling services come under the Student Welfare Office. The goal is the short term and long-term counselling support to help students identify and handle difficulties relating to their academic, professional and even family environment. Interpersonal and intimate relationships, identity formation, family affairs, losses and separations, social impact on others, adjustment to the new environment are some of the major concerns that students may face during their time of study.

EIMF aims to offer support to its students when facing such difficulties through counselling and psychological support services that are managed by EIMF associate Ms Lefki Angeli who will be available via email and skype for all long-distance students. Ms Angelis is a former social worker and practitioner in psychology and, as such, with a strong understanding of human behaviour and significant experience in offering counselling services.

Career office

The Career Office is one of the two units (in addition to the Office of Counselling) that form the Student Welfare Service. It is the duty of this Office to inform students through the various communication channels available at the EIMF (emails, learning platform, etc)

about events and seminars, job opportunities and other career prospects in the public as well as in the private sector. Importantly, EIMF aims at promoting its students in the European and international area through cooperating with business corporations abroad and other European and International higher education Institutions.

6. Additional for distance learning programmes (ALL ESG)

EEC Comments:

- Findings
 - The EEC was concerned in its evaluation of distance learning delivery by not having access to at least one fully detailed module. The resource-base required for the delivery of distance learning programs appears to be underestimated by the institution, both in terms of academically experienced staff and technical support staff.
- Strengths
 - The platform supports communication between students and teachers as well as communication between students.
- Areas of improvement and recommendations
 - Concerns have been identified above that the institution has inadequate academic staff with distance learning experience and therefore needs to recruit appropriately qualified staff. The institution needs to recruit appropriately qualified academic and support staff.

Regarding the strengths of this assessment area, EIMF would like to note that the EEC has responded positively to a high number of quality indicators and criteria. Overall, the marks awarded reflect a positive approach by the EEC as the average mark is above 7.5 with EIMF scoring 9 in many cases.

Nevertheless, the EEC has outlined some valid concerns that EIMF has pursued to address in its attempt to improve the Programme and reach the necessary quality standards. Already many of the points raised have been raised in the previous sections as well.

Analytically, EIMF wishes to deal with Areas of Improvement and Recommendations and address all those quality indicators/criteria that received a mark less than 7.

Quality Indicators: - Marks below 7

- (6.3) The process and the conditions for the recruitment of teaching staff ensure that candidates have the necessary skills and experience for distance learning education → 3
- (6.14) Infrastructure for distance education is comparable to corresponding university infrastructure in the European Union and internationally → 6
- (6.15) Electronic library services are provided according to international practice in order to support the needs of the students and the teaching staff → 6

- (6.16) The students and the teaching staff have access to the necessary electronic sources of information, relevant to the programme, the level, and the method of teaching→6
- (6.18) Feedback on students' assignments is regular through concrete and published procedures→6
- (6.20) The teaching e-learning material has been sufficiently enriched with electronic sources, updated research publications and other electronic learning resources that support students' work and learning→6

Specific Comments by EEC:

- (6.1) There are plans for the unit but at the moment the detail of the plan is not clear.
- (6.3) There are no plans to recruit staff with explicit distance learning experience.
- (6.10), (6.13) There are no clear plans for the recruitment for appropriately skilled staff for the operation of the system.
- (6.14) The experience of the EEC is that distance learning programs requires higher level of support that was is indicated on the plans.
- (6.15), (6.16) We were not provided with the details regarding the electronic library.
- (6.17) We were not provided with the details regarding the level of weekly assignments.
- (6.18), (6.20) Fuller documentation of the procedures and the material is required.

EIMF Reply:

Training Programme (In response to comments in section 'findings' and 'areas of improvement and recommendations')

Thought initially the MSc Programme was planned to be offered in the academic year 2019-2020, the intention is now to offer the course for the 2020-21, taking into account the consideration of the EEC that a one year delay will benefit EIMF and essentially allow it to be better prepared for the delivery of the course. Within this year the EIMF has planned to offer a training programme ('How to teach online') for its academic staff (permanent and part-time) that will finish prior to the commencement of the MSc Programme.

The programme 'How to teach online' will designed and delivered by an established academic in the field of distance learning, Professor Charoula Angeli that has been contracted by EIMF to assist in the development of its Distance Learning Unit.

The overall aims of Professor Angeli is to introduce:

- Relevant delivery modes based on a variety of pedagogical methods
- Innovative and diverse teaching methods, learning environments and learning aids
- Educational activities that encourage students' active participation

Through its instructional design the course aims to secure the following for each module:

6. Ongoing formative online assessments.
7. Peer, Expert, and Self-assessment.
8. Learning analytic

Overall the course will secure:

- How to organize the course content in weekly modules
- How to set clear objectives and expectations for each week
- Design of online learning activities (individual/group)
- Student evaluation (quizzes, group projects, case studies, etc.)
- Assessment rubrics/types of feedback
- Asynchronous and synchronous communication
- Course facilitation

Having completed the course the teaching instructors will be in a much better position to deliver their courses and, even more, they will have the option of contacting Professor Angeli during the semester if they have any particular issues they want to resolve.

Inadequate academic staff with distance learning experience (The institution needs to recruit appropriately qualified academic and support staff) (In response to comments in section 'areas of improvement and recommendations' and point 6.14)

Academic Staff: EIMF acknowledges the challenges academics face when shifting from the conventional teaching method to distance-learning teaching. Nevertheless, it is common practice in other universities for such challenges to be overcome by providing academics with the necessary training and support before they are assigned to teach long-distance modules. For this essential training, the EIMF has contracted a leading scholar in educational technology and e-learning (Professor Angeli) that will guarantee the readiness of the EIMF academics to provide distance learning. Furthermore, Professor Angeli will be available to provide support through the course and upon request of the academics deal with any issues that may arise.

- Professor Charoula Angeli holds a degree in Computer Science at Indiana University-Bloomington in the USA (BS in computer science, in 1991, master's degree in Computer Science, 1993) and a Ph.D. in Educational Technology from the same University (PhD in Instructional Systems Technology, 1999). She also pursued a post-doctoral fellowship at the Learning Research and Development Center at University of Pittsburgh. Her research interests include the pedagogical use of computers in the learning process, designing curriculum with technology, software design, computational thinking, technological pedagogical content knowledge, and distance learning. Within the context of distance learning, Professor Angeli is particularly interested in how the online instructor can promote quality discourse during problem solving in online discussion groups.

Additionally, in relation to the comment made by EEC that 'EIMF has no plans to recruit staff with explicit distance learning experience', EIMF went ahead with reaching an agreement on a part-time basis with an academic (Dr Koutsoukis) that has more than ten years in long-distance teaching and, in particular, has taught similar courses to the ones he will be teaching at the EIMF. The decision to initiate a cooperation with Dr Koutsoukis was based on the EEC comments that essentially advice EIMF to consider experience in distance-learning as an important factor in the recruitment of academic staff (see point 6.3)

Administrative/Support: Overall, EIMF has an already well functioning administrative team (something that was noted by EEC in Section 5: 'They have competent administrative staff'). Regarding the support required for teaching long-distance, it is worth noting that the chosen platform Classe365 has an efficient support team that up to now has responded swiftly to all issues encountered when setting up the module 'Corporate Governance' (available on-line). In addition, EIMF has an IT officer employed on a permanent basis that is in a position to offer technical assistance to both academics and students (if required). This is additional to the administrative support offered to both academics and students by the Support Team of the Distance Learning Unit. Furthermore, EIMF has contracted a librarian on a full-time basis that will be adequately trained on the electronic platforms used and for assisting the students with their reading material.

At this point in time and prior to the official commencement of academic programmes, there is no need to proceed with any further permanent additions in staff numbers, however, once academic programmes begin and pending on the number of academic programmes offered and the number of students enrolled, the EIMF management has already agreed to make all the necessary recruitments in terms of support for the proper functioning of the academic programmes.

Electronic library (In response to points 6.15 and 6.16)

EIMF wants to confirm that Electronic library services will be provided according to international practice in order to support the needs of the students and the teaching staff. The library services have been reviewed in the section 'Resources'. Once again, it is important to note that EIMF has already recruited a librarian on a full-time basis and is responsible for overseeing the availability of the necessary electronic resources.

Distance Learning Unit (In response to points 6.1 and 6.14)

According to the EEC comments the 'detail of the plan is not clear' for the Distance Learning Unit (DLU). During the Day of Review a separate presentation was prepared in relation to the DLU where the structure of the Unit was presented. The initial plan is for the DLU to be headed by the EIMF Academic Director who will be responsible to ensure that the Unit fulfils its aims. There will be a Support Team that will provide the necessary backing covering both (1) technical/infrastructural issues (IT support) and (2) administrative support to both academics and students that may have queries/difficulties in using the platform or other aspects of the long-distance teaching.

For the proper functioning of the Distance Learning Unit it has been considered essential that the EIMF partner Professor Angeli will have an advisory role as an External Consultant to the DLU. Professor Angeli's relevant knowledge, expertise and experience will be invaluable in the early stages of setting up and operating a DLU.

Weekly Assignments (In response to point 6.17)

The uploaded module provides all the details regarding the weekly assignments something that is also analysed for each module separately in the course outlines prepared

Formative Assessment and Feedback (In response to points 6.18)

The Feedback and Assessment processes have already been reviewed in the previous section. Yet for easy reference the EIMF's policies for making feedback on students' assignments regular through concrete and published procedures is repeated below.

As part of the MSc programme there is a clear intention to provide students with constructive feedback that will allow them to improve their performance while at the same time the students are made aware of how each of their assessments will be formally assessed through the 'Guideline for Student Assessment'. At this point time and given that the EIMF is not yet an accredited tertiary education institution with running academic programmes, it is not possible to provide evidence of how this policy is implemented.

The 'Guideline for Student Assessment' is a comprehensive document that provides the student with a analytical framework on how his/her assignments are to be marked and feedback forms that are to be completed by the teaching staff.

Additionally, the following points need to be highlighted:

- Feedback will be offered by the teaching instructor through the discussion forums where students are required to participate and there will be continuous interaction between the teaching instructor and the students.
- There will be two formal meeting per semester between the student and his/her Mentor and, in addition, upon the student's request, meetings can be arranged with the Programme Coordinator to discuss the learning progress and performance of the student, any issues that may have been encountered and how to improve future performance.
- There will be live sessions (a minimum of four for each course) where the instructor will offer a review of the weekly topics and discuss the learning activities with the students offering them a chance to gain valuable feedback on the activities they should have completed.
- All teaching instructors are required to have weekly office hours so that the students may have synchronous meetings where they will be able to discuss any issues in relation with the course and receive direct feedback and answers.
- Communication via email: Teaching instructors should respond swiftly to the students' emails wherever possible within 2 working days (Monday – Friday).
- The Online quizzes offer feedback for each question and thus students have the chance to see the reasoning behind each answer and where they did wrong.

B. Conclusions and final remarks

Comments by EEC

The EIMF acknowledges that on the day of the review, the EEC was not convinced that the institution was fully conversant with the requirements for delivering a programme at a Masters level. Being fully aware of the challenges of offering programs at Masters level, the EIMF has taken the necessary action in response to the issues raised, in order to become conversant with the requirements for delivering this Programme, in a convincing manner.

With reference to the key issues highlighted by the EEC in its concluding remarks, the EIMF has provided relevant comments:

Recruiting appropriately qualified academic and support staff: Based on the suggestion for recruiting 'research-active academic staff who can ensure appropriate supervision of research thesis and, when necessary, support other members of staff to do so need to be present', the EIMF has contracted two academics on a part-time basis that will significantly fill this gap. Both are active researchers with experience in supervising and monitoring the research of postgraduate students (MSc and PhD). In addition, it is worth noting that a member of the permanent staff (Dr Platis) has overseen more than 30 dissertations at the Masters level, while Dr Sfiniadaki has been involved in the assessment of research work at the Masters level for the current academic year at EUC. Importantly, all members of staff have publications (including high-ranked journals) and the aim is, within the research framework of the EIMF, to secure that research is continuously pursued in a productive manner and relevant to the Institute's areas of interest.

Additionally, support for the creation of a long-distance module has been secured by contracting Professor Angeli (a leading expert in distance-learning) who will train all academic staff members and secure the quality of the distance-learning material produced. Her support will be continuous and EIMF academics will be able to contact her on any issues raised during the delivery of the modules. Importantly, it is helpful to note that one of the members of academic staff, Dr Koutsoukis, has relevant experience in teaching long-distance and may provide assistance to fellow members of staff, if and when required.

The EIMF is pleased that the EEC were impressed by the online platform and, in line with their suggestions, developed the online material for one course (GRC 705). By reviewing the course on the platform, one is able to see the relevant teaching tools and how the quality of the students' learning experience is secured.

Overall, the EIMF has responded in a positive manner to the comments and issues raised by the EEC and has tried to accommodate all of their concerns in a convincing manner so as to gain approval for the delivery of the MSc Programme for the academic year 2020-21. The delay of one year in offering the course has worked out in a positive manner for the EIMF and has allowed for important changes to be made that have strengthened its position and allowed for the necessary preparation in order to offer a high quality MSc Programme that meets the demands of the market.

ANNEX 1: Revised course outlines for four modules:

Included in this Annex are the Revised Module Outlines for the following modules:

- i. Corporate Governance (GRC705) – This is the module that is available on the learning platform as requested by the EEC. The teaching instructor of the course is Dr Adonis Pegasiou.
- ii. Compliance Regulation (GRC 710) – Following the comments of the EEC this is one of the modules that has been revised. The teaching instructor of the course is Dr Pantelitsa Sfiniadaki.
- iii. Risk Management (GRC 715) – The teaching instructor for the course has changed and Dr Koutsoukis has revised the course accordingly and renamed it ‘Risk Management’ (instead of ‘Enterprise Risk Management’). The recruitment of Dr Koutsoukis is in line with the recommendations of the EEC which suggested that academic which are active in research and have long-distance teaching experience at the postgraduate level, need to be added to the academic staff of the EIMF. In addition, the content of the course has been enriched and now includes more recent literature as suggested by the EIMF
- iv. Emerging Technologies and the Law (GRC 745). The teaching instructor of the course has changed and Dr Habigna has revised the course accordingly and renamed it ‘Emerging Technologies and Law’ (instead of ‘Technology and Law’). Dr Habigna has been recruited in line with the suggestions of the EEC which pointed out the need to have academics with relevant expertise and research publications. Dr Habigna specialises on the topic she will be teaching, has experience in supervising research by postgraduate students and is also active in research.

M.Sc. Governance, Risk and Compliance

Corporate Governance

Objective

This module explores the key concepts and features of corporate governance. It develops an understanding of the relevant theories, assesses key failures in corporate governance that have highlighted the need for securing efficient corporate governance mechanisms, examines the regulatory environment where financial institutions operate and looks at how corporate governance codes have developed and the different models of corporate governance that have evolved in different countries and industries. In addition, the module explores the role of the Board and its Directors, the shareholders, other relevant stakeholders and the gatekeepers of corporate governance. Importantly, the module also studies the concept of managing corporate risk and the overall importance of creating an efficient internal controls mechanism within an organisation so as to ensure the processes and procedures are respected and applied. Finally, the module offers a review of how Corporate Social Responsibility affects Corporate Governance and assesses the impact the Financial Crisis had on Corporate Governance. Having covered these thematic areas, the aim is to ensure that the student has gained a comprehensive view of corporate governance both from a theoretical and practical perspective.

Intended Learning Outcomes

Having successfully completed this module, the students will be able to demonstrate knowledge and advanced understanding of:

- Leading contemporary theories of corporate governance and frameworks and how these apply to different corporate governance structures
- The reasons behind notorious corporate governance failures and the remedial actions they inspired
- The development of influential corporate governance codes and the various types of corporate governance models that have evolved in recent years
- The role and responsibilities of the board of directors in shaping the strategy of a company and protecting the interests of stakeholders
- How to identify, evaluate and manage corporate risk at the highest level
- To assess the importance of creating and implementing an efficient and effective internal controls mechanism
- The growing importance of corporate socially responsibility and how it relates to corporate strategy

M.Sc. Governance, Risk and Compliance

- The impact of the financial crisis, how it has challenged long-standing views/perceptions on corporate governance and what are the key lessons learned from the crisis.

Learning methods

- Presentations by Instructor: A presentation will be prepared and uploaded each week by the teaching instructor. The presentation will cover the week's thematic area and also guide the students on the learning activities.
- Reading Material: Extended academic references and bibliography are included in the course guideline. The reading material includes book chapters, journal articles and primary material (such as official reports or codes of governance). Students are expected to review at least three of the key readings (including one item of the key readings). A special study pack is available on the learning platform and includes at least one key reading from each week/topic. More specifically those items that have a (*) are included in the study pack.
- Synchronous Live Meetings: There will be at least four live sessions (synchronous online meetings) – where the instructor will offer a summary of the key topics covered in the weekly lecture uploaded, review the learning activities students are assigned weekly and, most importantly, the students will have the chance to seek answers to questions or queries they may have. The live sessions will be recorded and uploaded on the learning platform so that those who did not have the chance to view the session live, can view it at their convenience.
- Discussion Forums: The instructor is expected to initiate a specific number of discussions in the specified forums of the platform where the participation of the students will be formally individually assessed (both the quality and the number of comments made by each student). In addition, the instructor may set up additional informal discussions and conversations covering topics included in the syllabus without these necessarily being assessed. Through the discussion forums the students are offered the chance to interact between them but also with the teaching instructor and be offered the relevant feedback.
- Online Quizzes: Various quizzes (including multiple choice and true or false) will be prepared and uploaded by the instructor. The quizzes will allow the students to go through a self-assessment process and test their knowledge on the specific topics. Feedback will be offered for each question.
- Recent Newspaper Articles: Newspaper or Magazine articles with more recent case studies will be included on a regular basis by the instructors as part of the learning activities (with specific questions for the students to address). Such an approach offers a more practical perspective to the students.

In addition an extensive list of other additional references is available for each lecture. The majority of the articles included have open access and the relevant links are included. Importantly, the students are also advised to further research and identify additional readings, either through the e-journals offered by the EIMF library or through the internet (the Google Scholar search engine may be of particular assistance).

Introductory Remarks

The students will be informed of the module outline, the key areas to be covered, the learning objectives, the teaching methodology, how they will be assessed and the relevant reading material they need to refer to.

Learning Activities

The students need to familiarise with the syllabus, learning objectives and reading material.

M.Sc. Governance, Risk and Compliance

WEEK 2 _ Corporate Governance Theoretical Framework

Lecture Objectives

The aim/objective of the course is to introduce students to the various theoretical approaches regarding corporate governance.

Students need to understand the differences between the theories reviewed and how these theories offer alternative explanatory frameworks when studying corporate governance from a practical perspective.

It is important for students to acknowledge that more than one theory may be applied (in a complementary manner) in the examination of various cases of corporate governance. In other words, the theories are not necessarily mutually exclusive.

Expected Learning Outcomes

By the end of this week students will be able to:

- To understand the main theories relevant to the development of corporate governance
- To identify the key differences and similarities between the theories reviewed
- To acknowledge how theories can be beneficial in the analysis of different systems of corporate governance

Introductory Remarks

Though the increasing use of the term 'corporate governance' in everyday usage has become evident in the past few decades, the theories that set the framework for reviewing the development of 'corporate governance' date much earlier and are not limited to a specific discipline area. Instead a variety of discipline areas are relevant to the study of 'corporate governance'.

The aim of the lecture is to offer an overview of those theories that seek to explain the development of corporate governance and examine how relevant and helpful these theories can be when examining the development of 'corporate governance'.

The lecture will first introduce the 'agency dilemma'. Adam Smith (1776) was one of the first to raise the principal-agent issue when he commented that: The directors of companies, being managers of other people's money, cannot be expected to watch over it with the same vigilance with which they watch over their own. In this case, the people that have the money are the principals and they contract the directors which act as agents in order to manage their own affairs (a distinction emerges between ownership and control). The key concern of whether the agent will be as vigilant as the principal in managing his money/investment has necessitated the study of 'corporate governance' and highlighted its importance. Even more, the principal-agent problem has become more compound over the years as the ownership structures of corporations have become more complex.

Having attained an understanding of the 'agency dilemma' and its importance in the study of 'corporate governance' the lecture will present the theories that are relevant to the study of 'corporate governance'. These theories include:

Agency theory: Agency theory identifies the agency relationship where one party (the principal) delegates work to another party (the agent). In the case of corporations, the theory views corporate governance mechanisms, especially the board of directors, as being an essential monitoring device that seeks to minimise any problems that may arise because of the principal-agent problem.

Transaction Cost Economics (TCE) (closely related to Agency Theory): It is based on the work of Coase (1937). TCE advocates that a firm could save costs by undertaking activities within an organisation rather than externally. Transaction costs are considered to be the indirect costs (i.e. non-production costs) incurred in performing a particular activity, for example the expenses incurred through outsourcing. When outsourcing, transaction costs arise from the effort that must be put into specifying what is required and subsequently coordinating delivery and monitoring quality. High transaction costs for outsourcing may suggest an in-house solution whereas low transaction costs for outsourcing would support the argument to outsource. The basic principle in relation to corporate governance is that that costs will arise when you get someone else to do something for you .e.g. directors to run the business you own.

Transaction cost theory and agency theory essentially deal with the same issues and problems. Where agency theory focuses on the individual agent, transaction cost theory focuses on the individual transaction.

Agency theory looks at the tendency of directors to act in their own best interests, pursuing salary and status. Transaction cost theory considers that managers (or directors) may arrange transactions in an opportunistic way.

The corporate governance problem of transaction cost theory is, however, not the protection of ownership rights of shareholders (as is the agency theory focus), rather the effective and efficient accomplishment of transactions by firms. Directors are likely to prefer to own things, or at least have long-term contracts in place, because it makes their lives easier through increased control and certainty over the future. As such, they are likely to create larger and larger organisations/companies. This may be good for them, but may not result in the best decisions for shareholders or other stakeholders:

- as the organisation may grow larger than is efficient;
- by agreeing long term contracts, the ability to take advantage of good deals in the future may be lost;
- because directors will get to know company staff, assets etc. very well (because they are internal), they may simply renew contracts without looking at outside options.

Stakeholder Theory: Takes into account a wider group of constituents rather than focusing on shareholders. Where there is an emphasis on all stakeholders (as opposed to merely focusing on shareholders) and how the various (if not conflicting) interests should be taken into account, this will be reflected in the governance structure of the company, for example via the direct representation of the stakeholder groups (or at least some, e.g. employers' representative).

Stewardship Theory: According to this approach, directors are regarded as the stewards of the company's assets and will be predisposed to act in the best interests of the shareholders. A steward is defined as someone who protects and takes care of the needs of others. Under the stewardship theory, company executives protect the interests of the owners or shareholders and make decisions on their behalf. Their sole objective is to create and maintain a successful organisation so the shareholders prosper. Firms that embrace stewardship place the CEO and Chairman responsibilities under one executive, with a board comprised mostly of in-house members. This allows for intimate knowledge of organizational operation and a deep commitment to success.

Learning Activities

- Review of the Lecture Notes and the relevant references provided
- Students need to familiarise with the basic theories and how they differ in their approach to corporate governance
- Students should research and select a case study where the issue of principal vs. agent was clearly evident
- Read the relevant article offered on the learning platform and attempt to answer the questions in the relevant forum on the learning platform

M.Sc. Governance, Risk and Compliance

WEEK 3 _ Assessing Corporate Governance Failures

Lecture Objectives

The lecture aims to introduce students to key scandals that illustrate significant corporate governance failures. In better assessing these case studies students must be in a position to distinguish between who is 'accountable' and who is 'responsible' for a corporate failure and, in addition, answer the relevant questions:

- What are the reasons behind such corporate scandals?
- How effective did the corporate governance framework prove to be?
- What sort of steps could be taken in order to restore trust in the market and the industry in general?

Intended Learning Outcomes

By the end of this week students will be able to:

- Define the terms 'accountability' and 'responsibility' and how the two differ
- Review major corporate scandals and failings that can be used as case studies in the study of corporate governance
- Assess the reasons behind these failings (where did corporate governance mechanisms prove to be ineffective), the lessons learned and possible reforms that were undertaken in the aftermath of the scandals

Introductory Remarks

Through the study of some of the key corporate scandals this lecture will aim to highlight the gaps in corporate governance that led to such failures. In doing so it will examine landmark corporate failures highlighting the relevance of responsibility and accountability for relevant officials. In examining the cases briefly reviewed below (among other) the aim will be to highlight where corporate governance went wrong and identify those areas that require improvement so to build effective governance mechanisms that will eliminate the possibilities of fraud and reckless policies that endanger the viability of corporations.

M.Sc. Governance, Risk and Compliance

To better comprehend the cases reviewed some key terms will be analysed, such as:

- Accountability may be linked to answerability and the action of having to provide answers (i.e. be accountable) and explain one's actions for whatever he/she may be accountable for.
- Responsibility is having complete charge over something and the person that is assigned with such responsibility is the root cause behind whether that thing succeeds, fails, lives or dies. Blame or praise will be assigned to this individual but this does not mean that he/she will need to provide answers for her actions.

The cases studies covered include: Enron, Parmalat and Baring Banks.

Enron

The Enron scandal, publicised in October 2001, eventually led to the bankruptcy of the Enron Corporation, an American energy company based in Houston, Texas, and the de facto dissolution of Arthur Andersen, which was one of the five largest audit and accountancy partnerships in the world. The Enron scandal is likely the largest, most complicated, and most notorious accounting scandal of all time. Through deceiving accounting tricks, Enron Corporation – a US-based energy, commodities, and services company – was able to trick its investors into thinking that the firm was doing much better than it actually was.

In addition Enron has been cited as the biggest audit failure. The scandal resulted in a wave of new regulations and legislation designed to increase the accuracy of financial reporting for publicly traded companies. The most important of those measures, the Sarbanes-Oxley Act (2002), imposed harsh penalties for destroying, altering, or fabricating financial records. The act also prohibited auditing firms from doing any concurrent consulting business for the same clients.

Parmalat

Parmalat was one of Italy's richest companies and used to be studied as a successful case study in business schools, though ironically it ended up being a case of immense financial collapse and corporate governance failure. The collapse of the company and the shock it caused to the system resemble the case of Enron.

Parmalat (founded by Calisto Tanzi) was a company that specialised in long-life milk. Through its success it expanded its operations (through the acquisition of other firms) but at the same time this led to an overblown debt. By 2003 the company had difficulty in making a bond payment even though it was supposed to have a large cash reserve. Following investigations, it was proven that the cash reserve was non-existent while an accumulated multimillion debt was revealed, thus leading the company into administration. Calisto Tanzi was accused of providing false accounting information and misleading the Italian stock market regulator. He was convicted to a ten-year sentence following one of Europe's largest fraud trials that lasted for more than three years.

Barings Banks

Barings Banks was a British historic merchant bank that collapsed in 1995 after one of its traders a talented yet unconventional trader (Nick Leeson) lost over $1 billion in unauthorized trades. Baring Banks has been criticised for its lack of effective controls at the time that essentially allowed Leeson that was based in Singapore to cover up the losses he made for several months. The bank's deficient internal auditing and risk management practices and its collapse sent shockwaves to international financial markets and led to a strengthening of internal controls and appropriate monitoring.

In all of these cases it is crucial to identify the shortcomings in corporate governance that contributed to the collapse of these companies. Could such weaknesses been dealt with in an efficient manner so as to prevent the collapse of these organisations and, if so, how?

WEEK 4 _ Development of Corporate Governance Codes

Lecture Objectives

The objective of the unit is to introduce students to the notion of corporate governance codes and why these have become more popular over the past decades. Students must be in a position to understand when and why are Governance Codes constructed and, furthermore, what are the key points highlighted in the most significant codes published until now. Finally, students must understand what is meant by the 'comply or explain' principle applicable in most codes and how this differs from rigid 'statutory requirements'.

Intended Learning Outcomes

By the end of this week students will be able to:

- Review the historical background to the development of Corporate Governance Codes
- Understand what the key factors are in developing Corporate Governance Codes
- Identify and explain which the most influential Codes are
- Critical Assessment of Corporate Governance Codes
- Clarify the 'comply or explain' principle

Introductory Remarks

The introduction and revision of corporate governance codes has significantly increased over the last two decades, not only at the national level but also at the international level with international organisations issuing policies of best practice. In response to major corporate scandals and the desire to promote transparency and accountability that would boost the confidence of investors and stakeholders in general, different institutions have revised or issued new codes of governance.

A code of corporate governance can be defined generally as 'a non-binding set of principles, standards or best practices, issued by a collective body and relating to the internal governance of corporations' (Weil et al., 2003).

Key Reports to be reviewed in the Lecture include:

The Cadbury Report, titled Financial Aspects of Corporate Governance, is a report issued by "The Committee on the Financial Aspects of Corporate Governance" chaired by Adrian Cadbury. The Committee was set up in May 1991 by the Financial Reporting Council, the Stock Exchange and the accountancy profession in response to continuing concern about standards of financial reporting and accountability. The Cadbury Report is considered to be a landmark publication as it sets out recommendations on the arrangement of company boards and accounting systems to mitigate corporate governance risks and failures. It defined corporate governance as 'the system by which companies are directed and controlled. Boards of directors are responsible for the governance of their companies. The shareholders' role in governance is to appoint the directors and the auditors and to satisfy themselves that an appropriate governance structure is in place.' This remains true today, but the environment in which companies, their shareholders and wider stakeholders operate continues to develop rapidly.

The Code includes the provisions that non-executive directors should be appointed for specified terms and reappointment should not be automatic, that such directors should be selected through a formal process, and that both their selection and their appointment should be a matter for the board as a whole.

In its report, the Cadbury Committee put forward the 'comply or explain' principle, as a practical means of establishing a code of corporate governance whilst avoiding an inflexible 'one size fits all' approach. This principle has since been extensively incorporated into numerous code regimes around the world.

Keay (2013) notes that the comply or explain principle provides that a company is to comply with a code's provision; but if it does not do so, then it is to state that it does not and explain why it does not. There is no provision in the UK for any statements by companies to be assessed by any regulatory body. It is incumbent on the markets generally and the company's shareholders specifically to determine whether the response of the company to code provisions does enough, and then to take some action if they do not. The aim of comply or explain is to empower shareholders to make an informed evaluation as to whether non-compliance is justified, given the company's circumstances.

Another notable report is the Turnbull Report, first published in 1999, that sets out best practice on internal control for UK listed companies. In October 2005 the Financial Reporting Council (FRC) issued an updated version of the guidance with the title 'Internal Control: Guidance for Directors on the Combined Code'. In September 2014 this was superseded by the FRC's Risk Guidance. The main argument of the report concerns the adoption of a risk-based approach to establishing a system of internal control and reviewing its effectiveness.

Also significant is the Walker Report (2009) (Link): In 2009 the Chancellor of the Exchequer, the Secretary of State for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform and the Financial Services Secretary to the Treasury 'announced a review to recommend measures to improve the corporate governance of UK banks, particularly with regard to risk management.' The Report was published in the same year and some of the key points include:

- Board level risk committees to be chaired by a non-executive
- Risk committees to have power to scrutinise and if necessary block big transactions
- More power for remuneration committees to scrutinise firm-wide pay

M.Sc. Governance, Risk and Compliance

- Remuneration committee to oversee pay of high-paid executives not on the board
- Significant deferred element in bonus schemes for all high-paid executives
- Increased public disclosure about pay of high-paid executives
- Chairman of remuneration committee to face re-election if report gets less than 75% approval
- Non-executives to spend up to 50% more time on the job

Emphasis will also be placed on the UK Corporate Governance Code (formerly known as the Combined Code as it draws from previous reports and codes) that sets out standards of good practice for listed companies on board composition and development, remuneration, shareholder relations, accountability and audit. The code is published by the Financial Reporting Council (FRC). The most recent update was published in 2018 (Link). In drafting the 2018 Code, the FRC's aim has been to improve corporate governance practice, stimulate constructive challenge in the boardroom and improve governance reporting. The 2018 Code's emphasis on the importance of corporate culture and diversity, the need for companies to engage with all their key stakeholders, including their workforce, and the requirement for executive remuneration and workforce policies to be aligned with the company's strategy and values have been welcomed by investors.

Applying the comply-or-explain principle: The 2018 Code retains the "comply or explain" approach. In fact this is one of its main characteristics and what distinguishes it from the Sarbanes-Oxley Act in the United States. The flexibility/voluntariness of the Code is expressed through the "comply-or-explain" principle. The comply-or-explain principle (as opposed to a 'tick-the-box' approach) remains a central element of most codes of corporate governance (at a European Union level and beyond).

WEEK 5_ Models of Corporate Governance

Lecture Objectives

The aim of the lecture is to introduce students to the various models of corporate governance that exist and enable them to understand how they differ. Emphasis will be placed on distinguishing between the insider and outsider models while highlighting how the legal systems in each jurisdiction play a decisive role in shaping the corporate governance model. In addition, the lecture will introduce attempts made within the EU in relation to a corporate governance model and whether globalisation pressures have initiated a convergence between the various models in recent years.

Intended Learning Outcomes

By the end of this week students will be able to:

- Understand the reasons behind the existence of various models of corporate governance
- Critically assess the differences insider and outsider models of corporate governance
- Consider the influence of legal systems and other factors on the evolution of corporate governance systems
- Assess the EU approach to Corporate Governance
- Evaluate convergence trends in corporate governance models but also identify those forces of differentiation
- Become aware of the impact on corporate governance from factors such as the country's legal system, capital markets, ownership structure

M.Sc. Governance, Risk and Compliance

Introductory Remarks

The Lecture seeks to categorise the various models of corporate governance evident worldwide and answer relevant questions that will allow a better understanding of the different arrangements existing (such as why different models exist, what are they key categories of each category and what are the distinguishing factors).

OECD, notes that there are a wide variety of corporate governance regimes in its member countries. Over the years, individual economies developed different capital market mechanisms, legal structures, factor markets and private or public institutions to act as owners or corporate governance principals in the economy. These arrangements might vary even within the same country according to the sector. They are very often the result of institutional, political and social traditions. Understanding and accepting this variety of approaches is a fundamental first step for analysing the impacts of increasing globalisation on national systems.

One traditional way of describing governance regimes has been to distinguish between “insider” and “outsider” systems. There are those systems that are founded on arm’s length, market-based relationships between firms and their investors (who are thus “outsiders”); and those whose accountability trail leads to specific interests of “insiders”, that are more permanently linked to the firm: major shareholders, banks, workers.

The legal system of each country is a good indicator regarding the corporate governance regime. The Common law (based on England’s medieval laws, e.g. UK and USA) offers good protection to minority shareholders thus leading to more diversified shareholder bases while Civil law (based on Roman Law) is not that effective on the protection of minority shareholders thus providing less impetus for a broad shareholder base.

Also it is important to note that the legal framework in each country affects the manner in which corporate governance reform is conducted. In countries with common law systems, such as the UK, corporate governance initiatives tend to be perpetrated through ‘voluntary codes’ of practice and recommendations. In countries with codified legal systems, corporate governance reform is achieved through government-led changes to countries’ corporate or commercial law frameworks Certain scholars (La Porta et al. 1997a; 1998; 2000a, Shleifer & Vishny 1997) have identified the most important feature of the common law systems for corporate governance to be the protection of minority shareholder rights.

Academic research has precisely suggested that countries’ legal systems influence corporate governance. Shleifer and Vishny (1997) point that a high degree of legal protection was necessary to persuade investors to hand their money over to companies. Legal systems characterised by low levels of investor protection were found to associated with poorly developed capital markets.

Le Porta et al (1997) explore in more depth the links between legal systems and corporate governance (having a sample of 49 countries). They suggest three legal traditions operating across the globe:

M.Sc. Governance, Risk and Compliance

- the French origin legal system known to afford lowest level of investor protection
- English origin legal system of common law affords the highest level of investor protection
- German and Scandinavian origin legal systems lie in between the two extremes

Importantly, though globalisation pressures may have encouraged a shift towards a global corporate governance model there are still distinct characteristics that obfuscate such an outcome (extremely different legal structures, financial systems and structures of economic ownership, culture and economic factors).

WEEK 6 _ Board of Directors: Structure and Functions of the Board

Lecture Objectives

The aim of the lecture is to introduce students to how Boards are structured and which are the key functions they perform. Students need to be able to distinguish between the one-tier and two-tier board structures and identify the key committees that each Board should have. The students need to be aware of the duties and responsibilities of Board Directors but also the key functions that Board Committees need to perform.

Intended Learning Outcomes

By the end of this week students will be able to:

- Understanding the responsibilities and key functions of the Board
- Reviewing the key Committees and their scope of work within a Board
- Distinguishing between alternative Board structures
- Assess the importance of diversity in Boards

Introductory Remarks

The Board of Director is possibly the most important component in the Corporate Governance structure of an organisation. The aim of this lecture will be to highlight what are the key functions and responsibilities of a Board, how the Board may be structured (reviewing different alternatives structures) and the importance of diversity within Boards.

A truly effective board of directors must take full responsibility and accountability for the firm it manages. Boards of Directors are responsible for the governance of their companies. Their task is to direct the company and, in doing so successfully, there are 4 key elements that are involved: strategy formulation; policymaking; supervision of executive management; and accountability to shareholders and others. The Board is therefore responsible for determining the company's aims and the strategies, plans, and policies to achieve those aims. In addition, it must vigilantly monitor progress in the achievement of those aims (both from an overview company aspect and also in terms of analysis and evaluation of its own performance as a board and as individual directors).

Appointing a CEO with the appropriate leadership qualities is a crucial responsibility for the Board.

Regarding the alternative Board Structures, the Lecture will introduce one-tier and two-tier board alternatives. One-tier Boards refer to companies that have a single governing body. Key questions that arise with such an arrangement concern the appropriate size of a unitary board and the right balance between executive and non-executive board members. For such boards there are four possible structures: a board solely comprised with executive directors (top managers), a board with a majority of executive directors, a board with a majority of non-executive directors, a board with only non-executive directors. Two tier Boards (e.g. Germany) involve two boards: the upper supervisory board that is comprised by outside directors (non-executives) and the management board comprised entirely by executive directors.

Emphasis will be placed on the various Committees that a Board needs to appoint in order to secure its efficient functioning. The various subcommittees appointed report regularly to the board and although the board may delegate various activities to these subcommittees (dispatches work based on specific thematic areas), it is the board as a whole that remains responsible for the areas covered by the subcommittees.

M.Sc. Governance, Risk and Compliance

While terminology may change the main committees that are expected to operate are: Audit Committee, Remuneration Committee, Nomination Committee, Risk Committee. All Committees need to have a clearly defined mandate.

Audit Committee:

The Audit Committee is considered the most significant of the Committees and its role in supporting the proper functioning of the Board is vital. In an attempt to assist company boards and directors serving in audit committees in carrying out their role, in September 2002 the Financial Reporting Council (FRC) established a Committee headed by Sir Robert Smith to review this issue. The report of the Smith Committee was published in January 2003 (Link). According to the report the main role and responsibilities of the audit committee should be:

- to monitor the integrity of the financial statements of the company;
- to review the company's internal financial control system and, unless addressed by a separate risk committee or by the board itself, risk management systems;
- to monitor and review the effectiveness of the company's internal audit function;
- to make recommendations to the board in relation to the appointment of the external auditor and to approve the remuneration and terms of engagement of the external auditor following appointment by the shareholders in general meeting;
- to monitor and review the external auditor's independence, objectivity and effectiveness;
- to develop and implement policy on the engagement of the external auditor to supply non-audit services. Where the audit committee's monitoring and review activities reveal cause for concern or scope for improvement, it should make recommendations to the board on action needed to address the issue or to make improvements

Remuneration Committee

The Remuneration Committee makes recommendations to the Board on the Company's framework of executive remuneration and its cost. It should determine specific remuneration packages for each of the executive directors.

The composition should be based only on independent non-executive directors thus securing that executive directors do not set their own remuneration levels. The remuneration of non-executive directors is decided by the Chairman and the executive members of the Board

Nomination Committee

According to the UK Governance Code 2018 (Link) a Nomination Committee needs to secure a formal, rigorous and transparent procedure for the appointment of new directors and ensure that plans are in place for the orderly succession to both the board and senior management positions, and oversee the development of a diverse pipeline for succession.

M.Sc. Governance, Risk and Compliance

It is important that the board has a balanced composition, both in terms of executive and non-executive directors, and in terms of the experience, qualities, and skills that individuals bring to the board (securing thus diversity within the Board).

Risk Committee

The Risk Committee focuses on risks of various types that feature significantly in the operations of businesses. The Committee will assist the Board of Directors in fulfilling its oversight responsibilities with regard to the risk appetite of the Corporation and the risk management and compliance framework and the governance structure that supports it. Risk appetite is defined as the level and type of risk a firm is able and willing to assume in its exposures and business activities, given its business objectives and obligations to stakeholders.

WEEK 7_ Board of Directors: Appointment, Roles, Performance and Remuneration

Lecture Objectives

The aim of the lecture is to review the competencies a Board Director needs to have and the criteria that must be met, in order for an individual to be appointed as Director in a Board. Furthermore, students must be introduced to the various approaches that may be used in order for the remuneration packages of the Directors to be decided. In addition, the assessment of the Directors' performance is another relevant issue that will be reviewed in the lecture, allowing the students to attain a better understanding of the importance of such a process and how this can be achieved.

Expected Learning Outcomes

By the end of this week students will be able to:

- Understand when, how and based on what criteria directors are appointed
- Review the desirable attributes and core competencies of a director
- Review how the remuneration of directors is decided
- Understand how the performance of Directors is assessed

Introductory Remarks

In selecting the Directors to be appointed in Board they need to have certain personal attributes that will help him/her have a successful term in the Board:

- Integrity: being ethically aware, able to distinguish between right from wrong, and able to judge corporate behaviour. This implies honesty, fairness and sound moral principles. The Director is expected to act honestly in a way that promotes the interests of the company and not self-interest (declare conflict of interest where it emerges)
- Intellect: The Directors must have an appropriate level of intelligence and independent judgement and be able to conduct all-around evaluations of situations
- Character traits: Independently minded, objective and impartial
- Personality (Interpersonal skills): Openness, flexibility, sensitivity, diplomacy, persuasiveness, ability to inspire and motivate

In addition, Board Directors should have competence skills and relevant knowledge of the enterprise, its business and board-level activities, the company's processes (including the use of board committees) as well as relevant information about the company's political, economic, social and technological contexts. Knowledge of the company includes: understanding of the basis of power, the basis of law under which the company operates and the governance rules and regulations are.

Once appointed, each Board Member has certain duties and responsibilities. These include:

- Bringing wider business and board experience
- Adding specialist knowledge, skills and know-how
- Being the source of external information (matters external to the company: market opportunities and threats, new technologies, industry developments, international developments)
- Connecting the Board to networks of useful contacts
- Providing status to the Board and the company, adding capability, reputation and positionBoard
- Providing independent judgement
- Being a catalyst for change

M.Sc. Governance, Risk and Compliance

- Being a monitor of executive activities
- Playing the role of watchdog

Remuneration of Directors

Directors' remuneration has become a contentious issue, trying to find the right balance between opposing arguments regarding the amount and the nature (cash and/or equity) of the remuneration. Overall the debate has been driven by the view that some directors and especially those directors in the banking sector are being overpaid to the detriment of the shareholders, the employees and the company as a whole. The perception that high rewards have been given without corresponding performance has caused concern.

In 2010 the International Corporate Governance Network (ICGN) issued a guidance covering Non-Executive Director (NED) Remuneration (Link). The Report sets out key remuneration principles which are recommended to be applied by companies globally. The Guidelines can be used as the basis for further discussing the remuneration strategy for NED

- Transparency - investors should be able to clearly understand the NEDs remuneration programme and see total remuneration for NEDs.
- Accountability - the Remuneration Committee should annually review total remuneration potentially payable to each NED and consult external advisers for their advice on their remuneration plans. Where external advice is obtained, an independent remuneration consultant should be used.
- Alignment of interests between NEDs and shareholders - the ICGN comments that policy issues related to NED remuneration are fundamentally different from executive remuneration and that a non-executive remuneration programme should align the interests of directors through the attainment of significant equity holdings in the company meaningful to each individual director. The programme should consist solely of a combination of cash retainer and equity-based remuneration and should not include the use of options or option-like equity remuneration. Companies should have the flexibility to set and adjust the ratio of equity and cash based remuneration as appropriate. Importantly, it must be noted that the use of share options tends to be falling and attention has turned to bonuses and other incentive schemes to reward performance

The ICGN policies on NED remuneration include the following:

- An annual retainer/fee should be the preferred form of cash remuneration paid to a NED and should reflect the level of expected duties of the director.
- Equity-based remuneration should be fully vested in the director on the grant date. The value of the equity on the grant date should be fully disclosed in the proxy statement.
- NED remuneration should not be performance-based as this has the potential to conflict with the independent nature of a NED.
- In relation to perquisites, only meeting-related expenses should be met.

M.Sc. Governance, Risk and Compliance

- NEDs should never participate in or be eligible for share or option repricing or exchange programmes or receive any severance payments or retirement benefits.
- NEDs should be required to repay remuneration in the event of malfeasance or breach of fiduciary duty.

WEEK 8_ Ownership: Shareholders and Institutional Investors

Lecture Objectives

The key objective of the lecture is to look into the various ways the ownership of corporations can be structured. Students will be informed of the various groups of shareholders that exist and what are the rights these shareholders (should) have within each corporation. Particular emphasis will be placed on institutional investors and whether their increasing presence in large corporations can ameliorate the 'agency problem'. Lastly the concept of 'stewardship' will be introduced in an attempt to underline its importance in the new era of corporate ownership dominated by institutional investors.

Expected Learning Outcomes

By the end of this week students will be able to:

- To analyse the ownership of listed companies
- To understand the shareholders rights
- To differentiate between different groups of shareholders
- To comprehend the key characteristics of institutional investors and review their growing influence (as opposed to other shareholders)
- To review the relationship between institutional investors' with their investee companies
- To understand the concept of stewardship
- To assess the evidence on the impact of shareholder activism on corporate performance and company value

Introductory Remarks

Ownership is a combination of rights and responsibilities with respect to a specific property. Stockholders are considered to 'own' the company in which they invest (at least part of the company). However, a share of stock does not translate into a specified segment of the company's assets and therefore shareholders have limited liability, limiting their opportunity to direct the affairs of the company and their responsibility to prevent or redress the corporation's wrongs.

M.Sc. Governance, Risk and Compliance

When reviewing corporate ownership structures Berle and Means in their famous 1932 book The Modern Corporation and Private Property noticed a new trend and commented that “in the largest American corporations, a new condition has developed....(T)here are no dominant owners, and control is maintained in large measure apart from ownership.” Ownership structure had become ‘dispersed’ as the shareholder had a more passive role where there were no dominant owners and controlled was maintained in large measure apart from ownership (thus creating an ‘agency’ problem). There was a separation of ownership (in the sense of ownership of equity stakes in companies) and control (in the sense of having the authority to determine corporate policy)

The latest research on corporate governance illustrates that there is a reversal in the findings of Berle and Means regarding ownership structure and an increase in ownership concentration through the transferal of ownership from individuals to institutions.

It has been argued that the strong presence of institutional investors can alleviate the ‘agency problem’ as these organisations are in a prime position to monitor company management and help align the interests of management to those of the shareholders. Nevertheless, there are other aspects that need to be dealt with since institutional investors are not actually the shareholders. This complex relationship may actually further perplex the agency problem. For example, a major concern is the increasing emphasis being placed on short-term profits at the expense of longer-term issues of corporate governance. According to the Kay Review short-termism results in a decline of trust and misalignment of incentives in the UK equity investment market.

Institutional Investors

In attempting to search for a precise, unanimously agreed, definition of an “institutional investor”, there is no such definition . The closest we get to a common characteristic is that institutional investors are not physical persons. Instead they are organised as legal entities. The exact legal form, however, varies widely among institutional investors and covers everything from straightforward profit maximising joint stock companies (for example, closed-end investment companies) to limited liability partnerships (like private equity firms) and incorporation by special statute (for example, in the case of some sovereign wealth funds). Institutional investors may act independently or be part of a larger company group or conglomerate. This is, for example, the case for mutual funds who are often subsidiaries of banks and insurance companies (Çelik, S., & Isaksson, M. (2014)). There are generally six types of institutional investors: endowment funds, commercial banks, mutual funds, hedge funds, pension funds and insurance companies.

Stewardship

Given the increasing important role that institutional investors play in corporate governance another issue that needs to be reviewed is the governance mechanisms and accountability chains within these investment institutions. An example of such an institution is a pension fund which has a duty to act in the interests of those individuals that place their money in the fund in order to be managed more effectively. For this financial arrangement to function efficiently there needs to be culture of trust. The recent financial crisis has led to increased doubts as to whether institutional investors can be trusted to act in the best interests of their members. In response to recent developments the notion of stewardship has become more prominent

Kay Review: The report recommends that there should be a much needed shift in the culture of the stock market. It includes restoring relationships built on long term trust and confidence, and realigning incentives across the investment chain (2012: 44) (Link): The concept of stewardship originates in the responsibilities of a steward as manager of a household or estate, and the historic analogy is apt. The essential characteristics of the steward are understanding and engagement – understanding the needs and expectations of those with whom the steward deals, and engagement with those who meet these needs and discharge the expectations of the principals. Trust and respect are key to the role of the honest steward. The honest steward expects to be rewarded for the discharge of that trust, but on a basis of full disclosure and only on that basis

The concept of stewardship is core to ensuring accountability, and, as corporate governance is entwined with concepts of accountability, it is logical that stewardship plays an important role in corporate governance. Stewardship is generally taken to refer to the role of the numerous fund managers employed by major institutions to invest many trillions of pounds, dollars, yen etc, belonging to billions of people via millions of corporations around the world. Today's stewards work for mutual funds, pension funds, investment banks, hedge funds, insurance companies etc.

WEEK 9_ Internal Controls – The Role of Internal Audit

Lecture Objectives

The objective of this lecture is to present to the students the notion of 'internal controls' and the weight that has been attributed to this concept in recent years (especially after the recent financial crisis). Such mechanisms are comprised of three lines of defence with each line having a particular and critical role to play in the proper functioning of the internal controls mechanism. In this week's lecture particular emphasis will be given to the role of internal audit which is a key component of internal controls and forms the third line of defence for each company while also the role of the compliance function will be reviewed (part of the second line of defence).

Expected Learning Outcomes

By the end of this week students will be able to:

- Define Internal Control and emphasise its importance in effective corporate governance
- Recognise the three-lines of defence model and how each line is comprised.
- Understand the importance of audit committees in contributing to effective corporate management
- Assess the key requirements that will enable the proper functioning of the Audit Committee
- Comprehend the role of the compliance function and its role within the three lines of defence model

Introductory Remarks

In 1992 the Committee of Sponsoring Organizations of the Treadway Commission (COSO) released its report on Internal Control—Integrated Framework (the original framework). The original framework has gained broad acceptance, highlighting the importance of the proper functioning of internal control mechanisms for any corporation, and is widely used around the world. It is recognized as a leading framework for designing, implementing, and conducting internal control and assessing its effectiveness.

In the revised COSO report (2013 - Link) Internal control is defined as follows:

Internal control is a process, effected by an entity's board of directors, management, and other personnel, designed to provide reasonable assurance regarding the achievement of objectives relating to operations, reporting, and compliance.

This definition emphasizes that internal control is:

- Geared to the achievement of objectives in one or more separate but overlapping categories
- A process consisting of ongoing tasks and activities—it is a means to an end, not an end in itself

M.Sc. Governance, Risk and Compliance

- Effected by people—it is not merely about policy and procedure manuals, systems, and forms, but about people and the actions they take at every level of an organization to effect internal control
- Able to provide reasonable assurance, not absolute assurance, to an entity's senior management and board of directors
- Adaptable to the entity structure—flexible in application for the entire entity or for a particular subsidiary, division, operating unit, or business process

Internal controls should be used to maintain the risks facing the company within the defined risk tolerance levels set by the board, bearing cost-benefit considerations in mind. An effective system of internal controls hinges on the right tone set at the top of the company – the board and audit committee should send out a clear message that internal control responsibilities must be taken seriously. On the one hand, the management is responsible to establish and maintain an effective system of internal control. On the other, the audit committee's role is crucial in overseeing these controls and reviewing the effectiveness of the system as a whole. The audit committee must provide oversight of the financial reporting process, the audit process, the company's system of internal controls and compliance with laws and regulations. It must secure that proper control policies, procedures and activities have been established and are operating as intended.

According to the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 there are certain audit committee requirements that need to be secured:

- The independence of audit committee members;
- the audit committee's responsibility to select and oversee the issuer's independent accountant;
- Procedures for handling complaints regarding the issuer's accounting practices;
- The authority of the audit committee to engage advisors;
- Funding for the independent auditor and any outside advisors engaged by the audit committee.

WEEK 10_ Internal Controls - Governance of Corporate Risk

Lecture Objectives

The key objective of this week's lecture is to introduce the concept of risk within a corporation and why the management of risk is considered a key component of internal controls mechanisms. The students need to understand what the risk-related duties and responsibilities of any Board are and how risk can be better managed (by setting a clear Risk Appetite Framework and clear procedures that can recognise, analyse, assess and manage different risks within the framework set). In addition, the students need to become familiar with the various types of risk corporations face (including operational, compliance, financial, reputational, environmental and social risks).

Expected Learning Outcomes:

By the end of this week students will be able to:

- Definition of Risk and Risk Management – What is their role in effective corporate governance
- Review of the Board Responsibilities for Risk Management
- What is meant by Enterprise Risk Management and why has it gained increasing importance in the corporate world
- Identify the different types of risk that may be encountered in a corporation and how can this be better identified, assessed and managed

Introductory Remarks

The recent global financial crisis has highlighted the need for greater emphasis to be placed at the board level on corporate risk assessment. Companies are now expected to adopt clear processes and procedures that enable them to identify, analyse, manage and mitigate any dangers, hazards, and other potentials for disaster—both physical and figurative—that may interfere with an organization's operations and objectives.

Enterprise Risk Management (ERM) has been employed by businesses as a method of dealing with relevant risks and covers the methods and processes employed by corporations in order to manage risks and identify opportunities.

COSO (Committee of Sponsoring Organizations of the Treadway Commission) (2004) (Link) offers a more precise definition in relation to ERM and noted that it is a process, effected by an entity's board of directors, management and other personnel, applied in strategy setting and across the enterprise, designed to identify potential events that may affect the entity, and manage risk to be within its risk appetite, to provide reasonable assurance regarding the achievement of entity objectives.

The definition reflects certain fundamental concepts – analytically ERM is:

- A process, ongoing and flowing through an entity
- Effected by people at every level of an organization
- Applied in strategy setting
- Applied across the enterprise, at every level and unit, and includes taking an entity level portfolio view of risk
- Designed to identify potential events that, if they occur, will affect the entity and to manage risk within its risk appetite
- Able to provide reasonable assurance to an entity's management and board of directors
- Geared to achievement of objectives in one or more separate but overlapping categories

Risk Analysis – There is a number of iterative (repetitive) phases

- Recognition – Though certain potentially harmful threats are obvious there are other risks that are difficult to identify (linked with unexpected occurrences that may never have happened before). It is essential therefore for firms to create the necessary corporate culture that places risk at the centre of thinking throughout the organisation so as to timely identify risks at every level. The Chairman and the Board have a vital role to play in securing that this culture is passed on at every level of the organisation.

- Assessment/Evaluation – A rather straightforward evaluation of risk includes is reflected in the following formula: *Extent of Risk = Potential Cost of Loss * Probability of Event Occurring*. Though the cost and the probability of some events is difficult to assess still broad estimates need to be made regarding the impact of an event and the likelihood of an event. A risk with a high loss but low chance of occurring will be treated differently compared to a risk that is likely to happen but the cost is low.
- Management Policies – In managing/treating risk one needs to engage in a process to modify the risk by changing the consequences that could occur or their likelihood. This process requires creative consideration of options and detailed design, both inputs being necessary to find and select the best risk treatment. Possible risk treatments carry a financial cost and require time thus making it impossible to implement all options. It is, therefore, necessary to choose, prioritise and implement the most appropriate combination of risk treatments by considering factors such as costs and benefits, effectiveness and other criteria of relevance to the organisation. Factors such as legal, social, political and economic matters may need to be taken into account. Treatment of individual risks seldom occurs in isolation, and options should be considered together as part of an overall treatment strategy.
- Monitoring - The Board of Directors (and the Risk Committee in particular) need to constantly monitor the implementation of the Company's Risk Policy and the proper management of risk but also secure that through the proper monitoring mechanisms all possible risks are timely identified.

WEEK 11_ Gatekeepers

Lecture Objectives

The aim of the lecture is to introduce students to the concept of gatekeepers by offering alternative approaches to a concept that is not a straightforward notion. It is important to understand the key characteristics of gatekeepers, their duties and responsibilities and how they can actually influence developments and have a positive or negative role in the corporate scandals. The students must be able to address the critical question on whether gatekeepers should be liable for the misrepresentations or fraud by their clients. The liability of gatekeepers is part of an ongoing debate in the corporate world that students need to be aware of.

Expected Learning Outcomes

By the end of this week students will be able to:

- Understanding the concept of 'gatekeepers'
- Assessing the liability of gatekeepers
- Determining the role of gatekeepers in corporate scandals and failures - To what extent can one blame gatekeepers for corporate scandals and failures
- Answer the question of what has been the reaction, if any, to gatekeeper failure?

Introductory Remarks:

Typically, the term 'Gatekeepers' connotes some form of outside or independent watchdog or monitor—someone who screens out flaws or defects or who verifies compliance with standards or procedures. Dispersed shareholders and non-executive directors, in particular, depend extensively on gatekeepers. Effective corporate governance requires a chain of actors: directors, managers, and gatekeepers. No chain is stronger than its weakest link.

Gatekeeper is an agent who acts as a reputational intermediary to assure investors as to the quality of the 'signal' sent by the corporate issuer. The reputational intermediary does so by lending or 'pledging' its reputational capital to the corporation, thus enabling investors or the market to rely on the corporation's own disclosures or assurances where they otherwise might not.

According to Coffee (2004) the term "gatekeeper" has been widely used to refer to the outside professionals who serve/assist the board or investors. Broadly as the term may be sometimes used, two core elements underlie the concept of gatekeeper, and it is important to distinguish between them:

- I. The gatekeeper is a person who has significant reputational capital, acquired over many years and many clients, which it pledges to assure the accuracy of statements or representations that it either makes or verifies.
- II. The gatekeeper receives a far smaller benefit or payoff for its role, as an agent, in approving, certifying, or verifying information than does the principal from the transaction that the gatekeeper facilitates or enables.

Obvious examples of gatekeepers who provide such verification or certification services would include:

- the auditor providing its certification of the issuer's financial statements;
- the debt rating agency certifying the issuer's creditworthiness (or relative creditworthiness);
- the security analyst providing its objective assessment of the corporation's technology, competitiveness, or earnings prospects;
- the investment banker providing its "fairness opinion" as to the pricing of a merger; and

M.Sc. Governance, Risk and Compliance

- the securities attorney for the issuer providing its opinion to the underwriters that all material information of which it is aware concerning the issuer has been properly disclosed.

The critical question that arises is whether gatekeepers should be liable to legal gatekeeper liability, the liability of professionals for the wrongs of their clients is premised on the ability of professionals to monitor and control their clients' conduct. The imposition of potential liability provides powerful incentives for professionals to exercise their ability to monitor and control, and thereby to deter, corporate wrongs.

Gatekeepers prevent corporate fraud by withdrawing or threatening to withdraw their reputational capital from questionable transactions. Theoretically, gatekeepers will not risk reputational capital for an individual client's benefit because credibility is difficult to obtain and critical to the gatekeeper's efficacy. Gatekeeper failure has grown increasingly common, suggesting that reputational capital is not nearly as valuable as once thought. Gatekeeper failure occurs when a gatekeeper lends credibility to a client's fraudulent activity and thereby conveys a false signal to the market. Gatekeeper failure also occurs if a gatekeeper discovers fraud but fails to withdraw its reputational capital.

The Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002 places particular emphasis on gatekeepers. Although it focuses on regulating the accounting industry, Sarbanes-Oxley also includes provisions for the protection of whistleblowers and "up-the-ladder" reporting requirements for corporate attorneys. Sarbanes-Oxley seeks to prevent gatekeeper failure by blocking efforts to place excessive pressure on accounting firms. Section 103 requires that auditors confirm that financial statements are prepared according to generally accepted accounting principles and disclose any "material weaknesses" in the client's internal controls. Sarbanes-Oxley also institutes protections for whistleblowers. Section 806 prohibits public companies from retaliating against employees that communicate information regarding a securities law violation to a federal agency, member of Congress or work supervisor. Section 307 requires that the SEC issue rules imposing a duty on corporate attorneys to report internally any information pertaining to the violation of securities law.

WEEK 12_ Corporate Social Responsibility and Sustainability

Lecture Objectives

Students need to gain an understanding on the meaning of Corporate Social Responsibility and Sustainability (CSR) as both gain increase popularity in the corporate world. Students must become familiar with what CSR stands for, how it is defined, the ethical dimension in promoting CSR and how this can be assessed. Additionally, students need to gain a good comprehension of what sustainability stands for, why it has received global focus and what are the targets set in relation to reaching a sustainable environment.

Expected Learning Outcomes

By the end of this week students will be able to:

- Understand the development of CSR
- Assess the origins of socially responsible investment
- The effects of social responsibility on financial performance
- Review of Sustainability and the triple bottom line
- Answer the question of what are the key sustainability goals at the global level

Introductory Remarks:

In recent years private corporations have placed greater emphasis on issues of social responsibility, taking a step back from strictly focusing on their financial performance.

Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR) is described by the European Commission as the 'guiding policy whereby companies integrate social and environmental concerns in their own mission, strategies and operations and in their interactions with their stakeholders on a voluntary basis' (EU Commission 2011).

The need to protect the interests of all stakeholders (and not merely the shareholders) has been explicitly recognised in the G20/OECD Principles of Corporate Governance:

The rights of stakeholders are often established by law (e.g. labour, business, commercial, environmental and insolvency laws) or by contractual relations that companies must respect. Nevertheless, even in areas where stakeholder interests are not legislated, many firms make additional commitments to stakeholders, and concern over corporate reputation and performance often requires the recognition of broader interests.

Broader interests usually cover the wider society and the environment. Development and growth in the free-market capitalist system has led to increased inequality at the global level and environmental degradation. Current and projected imbalances in natural systems (such as fresh water shortages, energy supply limits, global climate change, and population increases) will adversely affect economic systems and human quality of life if not addressed. Furthermore, large-scale scandals by multinational corporations have further fueled protests and reaction against the business community, highlighting the negative effects suffered by society as a result of corporate actions and misconduct.

Under such pressure, it has become an ethical obligation of the business corporations to adopt a CSR policy as a way of giving back to society and dealing with the increasing inequality, poverty and what seems to be a non-sustainable growth model.

M.Sc. Governance, Risk and Compliance

CSR conventionally refers to corporate representatives' voluntary integration of social and environmental concerns into their business decisions. Interestingly, however, there is not yet one universally accepted definition as to what CSR stands for. A more broad approach (Blowfield and Murray, 2011: 12) uses corporate responsibility as an umbrella term that captures the variety of ways in which businesses' relationship with society is being defined, managed and acted upon. In this context corporate responsibility comprises (a) the responsibilities of business in the context of wider society, (b) how those responsibilities are defined and negotiated and (c) how they are managed and organised.

Another approach is to understand CSR as the companies' aim of conducting business in a way that is ethical. This means taking account of their social, economic and environmental impact, and consideration of human rights. This may involve a range of activities such as:

- Working in partnership with local communities
- Socially responsible investment (SRI)
- Developing relationships with employees and customers
- Environmental protection and sustainability

The triple bottom line (TBL), a sustainability framework firstly introduced by Elkington (1994) is an attempt to place on equal terms with profit/loss social and environmental concerns. The TBL posits that instead of one bottom line, there should be three: profit, people, and the planet. A TBL seeks to gauge a corporation's level of commitment to corporate social responsibility and its impact on the environment over time.

Analytically the three bottom lines that companies should be working on are:

- Profit: The traditional measure of corporate profit—the profit and loss (P&L) account.
- People: Measures how socially responsible an organization has been throughout its operations.
- The Planet: Measures how environmentally responsible a firm has been.

If a firm looks at profits only (single bottom line), ignoring people and the planet, it cannot account for the full cost of doing business.

Marking the 25th anniversary of introducing the concept, Elkington (2018) (Link) notes that the Triple Bottom Line has failed to bury the single bottom line paradigm. TBL's stated goal from the outset was system change — pushing toward the transformation of capitalism. It was never supposed to be just an accounting system. To truly shift the needle, however, we need a new wave of TBL innovation and deployment. But even though my company, Volans, consults with companies on TBL implementation, frankly, I'm not sure it's going to be enough. Indeed, none of these sustainability frameworks will be enough, as long as they lack the suitable pace and scale — the necessary radical intent — needed to stop us all overshooting our planetary boundaries. Hence the need for a "recall." I hope that in another 25 years we can look back and point to this as the moment started working toward a triple helix for

WEEK 13_ The Impact of the Financial Crisis

Lecture Objectives

The recent financial crisis has raised important questions in relation to how corporate governance mechanisms failed in preventing such a catastrophe. The aim of the lecture is for the students to understand the roots and causes of the crisis, what were the most significant corporate governance failures, the lessons learned and the reforms that resulted from this experience.

Intended Learning Outcomes

By the end of this week students will be able to:

- Assess the long-term causes of the financial crisis and the systemic issues of corporate governance
- Identify the precursors of the 2007-8 collapse
- Understand the governance issues involved in the collapse
- Consider the significance of risk issues in precipitating the collapse
- Answer the question of what are the main changes brought about in corporate governance arrangements as a result of the crisis

Introductory Remarks

The recent global financial crisis has revealed a number of shortcomings in relation to corporate governance.

The crisis was initiated because of the rising number of defaults on subprime mortgages in the US. The mortgage assets were packaged and sold as securitised products on international markets (often graded as low risk products) in what seemed to be an act of diversifying risk and thus reducing the risk of market failure. Consequently, banks watered down the criteria they were prepared to lend, investors increased their demand for products that they did not understand and could not acknowledge the risks involved, while regulators were relaxed because of what was considered to be a diversification of risk. As the default rate on sub-prime mortgage lending increased the crisis came to a head. Some of the leading investment banks collapsed as a result of their exposure to these 'toxic packages' while the credit crisis at the international level had on knock-on effects on the credibility of sovereign states as well. Effectively the crisis led to increased regulation in order to ensure that banks and other financial institutions will be better equipped to handle future crises.

In explaining the financial crisis of 2007-08 that had profound global effects, one cannot merely focus on one specific reason. A multiple set of factors led to the crisis including: the regulatory framework and the relevant institutions assigned with regulation and supervision of the finance industry; the aggressive development of financial products which outstripped the ability of regulators to control (or even understand) these products; the development of techniques that gave a false impression of having managed to tackle risk; greed that fueled a continuous search for extra profit that led to financial products which were poorly understood; and inadequate corporate governance mechanisms that could have identified the dangers associated with such high-risk products.

This lecture will focus on the failure and weaknesses of corporate governance arrangements ahead of the crisis and how these failures proved to be detrimental in the collapse of the financial system. Such weaknesses include:

Ineffective Board Oversight and weak risk management - Governance issues included:

- The role of the board in overseeing risk management systems
- Adequate control mechanisms to oversee their risk appetite
- Transmission of risk information through effective channels - how the relevant information was used in an organisation. Such a failure to transmit information can be due a silo approach to risk management (i.e. a reluctance to share information with employees of different divisions in the same company). As a result, risk management information was not always appropriate or available to the board
- Inadequate understanding and control over potential balance sheet growth and liquidity needs
- Failure of Risk Management Systems - the financial turmoil has revealed severe shortcomings in practices both in internal management and in the role of the board in overseeing risk management systems

Distorted incentive systems:

- Remuneration Policies: Incentive systems that encourages and rewarded high levels of risk taking. Remuneration and incentive systems have played a key role in influencing financial institutions sensitivity to shocks and causing the development of unsustainable balance sheet positions.
- Remuneration has to be aligned with the longer-term interests of the company and its shareholders

Corporate governance and risk management characteristics significantly changed after the financial crisis. More companies tend to include a Chief Risk Officer in their structure, having more independent boards, and increase the size of their risk management committees. Furthermore, there have been increasing regulatory requirements that necessitate the functioning of an efficient, competent and well-staffed compliance unit.

WEEK 14 _ The Future of Corporate Governance

Lecture Objectives

The final lecture aims to highlight the most significant open/unresolved issues of corporate governance that are part of ongoing debates and discussions between relevant academics, technocrats and professionals. Students must be able to identify those drivers of change that will enable for the corporate governance to progress and deal with modern day challenges in an efficient manner that will limit the possibility of future financial and corporate failures.

Intended Learning Outcomes

By the end of this week students will be able to:

- Examine unresolved issues in corporate governance
- Review of the issues that are currently dominating corporate governance discourse
- Identify new trends in corporate structures and governance
- Assess the main drivers of change in corporate governance

M.Sc. Governance, Risk and Compliance

Introductory Remarks

This lecture will review those changes that can be expected in corporate governance over the ensuing decade and the prevailing trends in corporate governance.

In a recent article named “Corporate Governance 2030: Thoughts on the Future of Corporate Governance” (Link), Stilpon Nestor outlined 10 key take-aways on the future of corporate governance:

1. Diversity at every level and of every kind will continue to grow.
2. Private companies will increasingly have outsiders on boards, who in many cases will be “professional” challengers, instead of lapdogs.
3. Stakeholders will figure frequently on board agendas—and on boards themselves, possibly as a result of regulatory changes.
4. While public company disclosures in the OECD might actually be streamlined...
5. ...private company boards will become more demanding on regular disclosures, and so will their shareholders.
6. A more holistic view of the firm will emerge through cultural audits.
7. Diversity, disclosure and interactions between principal and their agents, as well as stakeholders will increasingly require high quality governance data...
8. ...which will increase demand for data platforms at every level
9. The Development Financial Institutions (DFIs) weight in the emerging markets (EM) governance area will continue to increase; they will become an important source of demand for the other three Ds (Diversity, Disclosure and Data)...
10. ...thus becoming themselves an important driver of change

Also, attention needs to place on issues such as: shareholder activism, cybersecurity, climate change, technical competence (Effective governance will increasingly depend on the extent to which directors are technology-literate, and are keeping pace with digital transformation)

Overall the Board’s Engagement with Corporate Social Responsibility is an issue that will remain a top priority in the coming years. As societal and political divisions increase, the board may be called upon to revisit the proper balance between corporate social responsibility initiatives, and responsibilities to shareholders and other constituents. Interestingly, legislation in the US has been authorising the incorporation of a new form of business corporation (the ‘benefit corporation’).

These are corporation with certain distinct characteristics:

- 1) it has a corporate purpose to create a material positive impact on society and the environment;
- 2) the duties of its directors are expanded to require consideration of interests in addition to the financial interest of its shareholders; and

M.Sc. Governance, Risk and Compliance

- 3) it is required to report each year on its overall social and environmental performance using a comprehensive, credible, independent, and transparent third-party standard

A benefit corporation is intended to make a profit for its shareholders, but the way in which that profit is to be made is through the conduct of business in a socially and environmentally responsible way.

Compliance Regulation

Objective

Every organisation needs to have a clear understanding of its regulatory obligations, compliance duties and expected ethical standards. Without this knowledge it runs the risk of criminal, civil or administrative liability, financial loss, adverse publicity and client dissatisfaction. It is essential that all organisations irrespective of the relevant market have the knowledge and procedures in place to accommodate risk management, regulatory and legal compliance and ethical values in their business. This Module aims to provide students with the required knowledge on Compliance principles, procedures, international bodies' guidelines and best practices from various jurisdictions. On the practical side, the Module will enable them assess the risk, find ways to mitigate the risk of non-compliance, design an internal compliance function and handle ethical crises in any organisation. In order to gain a more tangible understanding of the Compliance function, this Module will also examine the Compliance functions and responsibilities of an organisation with particular laws on the important subjects of money laundering, White Collar crime and Data Protection.

General Learning Outcome

On successful completion of the course, students will gain knowledge on the following subjects;

- Origin and definition of Compliance
- The Role of Compliance in financial services institutions and a general organisation setting
- Advantages of Compliance in financial services institutions and a general organisation setting
- Regulatory Compliance and Criminal Compliance
- The Risks of Non-Compliance
- Best practice Principles of Corporate Governance
- Ethical Dimension of Compliance
- Governance, Risk and Compliance – the GRC Concept
- The Interaction between Compliance and Internal Audit
- The Interaction between Compliance Planning and Internal Audit
- Compliance Management Systems
- Compliance Officer's skills and competencies, functions, responsibilities and rights
- IT GRC Solutions and how to make them work effectively
- EBA guidelines on internal governance
- The basic concepts, international initiatives drawing a comparative study of the anti-money

- Concepts of Anti-bribery
- Goals of an Anti-bribery policy
- The OECD/G20 anti-bribery convention and guidelines
- The applicable Legislation and Regulation from various jurisdictions on White Collar crime
- The risk and gain lessons from major bribery Investigations
- The General Data Protection Regulation (EU) 2016/679 (GDPR) on data protection and privacy for all individual citizens of the European Union (EU) and the European Economic Area (EEA)

In addition, students will:

- Appreciate the importance of monitoring and systematic auditing of the compliance program
- Become knowledgeable on methodologies that measure the effectiveness of existing controls and identify gaps in the control structure
- Be able to design and implement an effective training and communication strategic plan that will promote the Corporate Compliance Program
- Become aware of the latest methodologies and technologies that can support them in their effort to design and promote their Corporate Compliance Program
- Able to understand the legal background of and design an effective whistleblowing system. They will also be in a position to understand the concept of forensic investigations, procedures investigation matrix

Learning methods

For each section a PowerPoint presentation, as well as reading material will be uploaded. Each week we will arrange a Tutorial meeting. The students will have the chance to ask questions and to discuss in detail the subject of the presentation. Furthermore, each two weeks we will arrange a forum discussion where the participants in the session will have the chance to exchange their opinions on the efficiency of corporate governance rules, the compliance function and the new challenges that companies and regulators face. Every week the students will have weekly activities in order to prove the comprehension of the curriculum.

COURSE STRUCTURE OUTLINE

WEEK 1&2_Ethics and Compliance

Objective

The objective of this Module is to introduce students into the theoretical background and origin of Compliance. The Module aims to help students gain an understanding of the role and advantages of Compliance for financial services institutions and for any organisational setting. Given the increasing regulation of all industries (here examples of various industries and jurisdictions are presented) and the criminal responsibility of legal persons and their management, it is important for students to understand the Compliance risk. The Module also teaches the best practice Principles of Corporate Governance and voluntary codes. Finally, it aims to assist students gain an understanding into the ethical dimension of corporate governance and offers approaches in dealing with ethical dilemmas and crises within organisations.

Expected Learning Outcomes

By the end of this week you will gain knowledge on the following subjects:

- Origin and definition of Compliance
- The Role of Compliance in financial services institutions and a general organisation setting
- Advantages of Compliance in financial services institutions and a general organisation setting
- Regulatory Compliance and Criminal Compliance
- The Risks of Non-Compliance
- Best practice Principles of Corporate Governance
- Ethical Dimension of Compliance

M.Sc. Governance, Risk and Compliance

Introductory Comments

According to the International Compliance Association (Link) the term compliance describes the ability to act according to an order, set of rules or request. In the context of financial services businesses compliance operates at two levels:

- Level 1 - compliance with the external rules that are imposed upon an organisation as a whole
- Level 2 - compliance with internal systems of control that are imposed to achieve compliance with the externally imposed rules.

Compliance brings about a number of benefits at the company and industry level including the following:

- It decreases the risk of fines, penalties, work stoppages, lawsuits or a shutdown of the business.
- It enhances relationships with regulators and other stakeholders
- Reputational benefits: The good name of the Company is maintained allowing corporations to enjoy improved business opportunities; secure agreements with suppliers and partners on more favourable terms; and seize upon certain business opportunities. A company may promote its compliance record and use it as a marketing tool.
- It may prevent delays and unanticipated cost in implementing new corporate objectives and thus preventing organisational paralysis → subsequently, advance compliance processes and models can ultimately help organisations move faster and more confidently while also reducing bureaucratic costs.
- At the industry level a more level-playing field is achieved

Ethics goes beyond the merely abiding to law and focuses on doing what is considered to be right without there being a universally accepted rule of what constitutes ethical behaviour. Establishing a culture based on ethics within an organisation will certainly assist the organisation in securing a more successful compliance record with reference to the existing legal/regulatory framework the corporation needs to abide. Ethics therefore may be considered to be the higher standard and if a company behaves according to the standard of ethics, then compliance will naturally follow.

Learning Activities

The Module activities are designed to assist you to study and to better comprehend the material taught. Based on the study material you have been given for this Module, consider:

1. What is Compliance and why is it important for organisations?
2. What are the different types of risk of non-compliance? Provide real historic examples to illustrate.
3. Which are the best practice principles?
4. Describe a scenario of an ethical crisis faced by your own organisation and present the dilemmas? Then explain the practices and approaches to deal with the crisis. Answer in reference to one particular industry of your own choice (indicatively financial services, securities, media, construction, health, genetically modified food, work place environment and safety).

WEEK 3 & 4 _Compliance Management

Objective

This Module explains how organisations perform the Compliance function to ensure it fulfills its control and assurance role and in the same time working with other departments achieving the business strategy and goals of the organisation. Starting with the GRC Concept, students will gain an understanding how these three practices namely Governance, risk management, and compliance help an organisation “reliably achieve objectives, address uncertainty and act with integrity”. Students will also grasp the synergies between Compliance and Internal Audit and the interaction in practice between the two functions and their respective planning in organisations. This Module then examines the Compliance Management Systems used. More emphasis is placed on the Compliance Officer where the required skills, competences, functions, responsibilities and rights of the Compliance Officer are presented in detail. In analyzing the functions of the Compliance Officer reference is made to EU Law on investment services companies as well as the EBA guidance on internal governance that credit institutions and investment firms must implement in to ensure effective and prudent management of the institution. In addition, taking into account the big volumes of daily transactions and people interacting with the everyday work of most organisations and the increased regulation, there is need for technologies mainly software. The Compliance Officers must be in a position first to evaluate the features and capabilities of technologies proposed by vendors.

Expected Learning Outcomes

By the end of this week you will gain knowledge on the following subjects:

- Governance, Risk and Compliance – the GRC Concept
- The Interaction between Compliance and Internal Audit
- The Interaction between Compliance Planning and Internal Audit
- Compliance Management Systems
- Compliance Officer’s skills and competencies, functions, responsibilities and rights
- EBA guidelines on internal governance
- IT GRC Solutions and how to make them work effectively

Introductory Comments

Governance, risk and compliance (GRC) refers to a strategy for managing an organization's overall governance, enterprise risk management and compliance with regulations. Effective GRC management means organizations need to gather important risk data, validate compliance, and report results to management within a clearly defined corporate governance framework. Definitions of GRC vary, as do the potential applications, uses, and organizational approaches to implementation.

The 3 Pillars of GRC are the following:

- Governance describes the overall management approach through which senior executives direct and control the entire organization, using a combination of management information and hierarchical management control structures.
- Risk Management is the set of processes through which management identifies, analyses, and where necessary, responds appropriately to risks that might adversely affect the realization of the organization's business objectives.
- Compliance means conforming to a set of requirements, as defined by laws, regulations, standards, contracts, strategies, and policies.

There are three key aspects to successful GRC implementation:

- Developing the policies and framework holistically in consultation with all stakeholders involved
- Training all relevant employees in relevant topics
- Communicating the framework with all employees and gaining their acceptance and execution

Importantly, there needs to be a clarification between Compliance and Audit as the two serve two very different roles in an organisation. First of all, the Compliance function is meant to reasonably ensure that the company is complying with all applicable laws, rules and regulations, as well as internal codes of conduct, policies and procedures. The objective is fundamentally operational. Looking at the present and towards the future to ensure that all activities are carried out in compliance with the prevailing regulatory requirements, because the appropriate policy and procedures are in place and being adhered to. The Compliance Function is essentially concerned with regulatory risk only, and the scope therefore of operations is more restricted than that of the Internal Audit Function, who are concerned with all risks to the organisation.

The Internal Audit function is designed to monitor and evaluate the company's internal control environment as to its adequacy, efficiency and effectiveness. The internal Audit's objective is fundamentally assurance. Looking at the past and present to provide assurance that all activities are being carried out in accordance the written policy and procedure.

M.Sc. Governance, Risk and Compliance

WEEK 5_Monitoring and Periodic Auditing of the Compliance Program

Objective

The objective of this Module is to help students understand the importance of monitoring and systematic auditing of the compliance program to achieve operational effectiveness. Students will explore various monitoring methodologies which measure the effectiveness of controls and explore methods that discover gaps in the controls' procedures.

The old saying of “what you cannot measure, you cannot control” holds for the case of implemented compliance risk procedures in any organisation too. If we do not know how we perform there is no way we can take any corrective actions. This is exactly the reason regular audits, performed either by internal or external teams are required. During these audits we are trying to identify the deviation of the existing situation from the ideal one we have designed and included in this course. We are actually trying to discover gaps in our control structure. Then we decide the way we can improve the system and the new measures we can introduce.

Expected Learning Outcomes

By the end of this Module students will be able to appreciate the importance of monitoring and systematic auditing of the compliance program.

Students will also become knowledgeable on methodologies that measure the effectiveness of existing controls and identify gaps in the control structure.

Keywords

- Auditing of compliance programs

Introductory Comments

A compliance audit is a comprehensive review of an organization's adherence to regulatory guidelines and assess the overall effectiveness of a business's compliance practices and protocols. Audit reports evaluate the strength and thoroughness of compliance preparations, security policies, user access controls and risk management procedures over the course of a compliance audit. Importantly, compliance auditing, either internal or external, can help a company identify weaknesses in regulatory compliance processes and create paths for improvement. In some cases, guidance provided by a compliance audit can help reduce risk, while also avoiding potential legal trouble or federal fines for noncompliance.

Compliance audits comprise a wide range of externally and internally driven examinations of an organization's fulfillment of legal or regulatory requirements, industry standards, licensing terms, contractual commitments, or other formal obligations. Nevertheless, because they are driven by needs to demonstrate adherence to legal provisions or regulations (including those conducted as part of formal investigations) they are most commonly performed by external auditors.

A compliance audit also uncovers intentional or unintentional weaknesses or deficiencies in a compliance program. The many and ever-changing standards and regulations with which the business must comply can sometimes cause compliance programs to be weak or un a final report often includes suggestions and recommendations for how the business owner can improve the program. intentionally deficient.

WEEK 6_Developing a Compliance Awareness and Ethics Program in the Organisation

Objective

The objective of this Module is to train students in designing and implementing an effective training and communication strategic plan that will ensure that all employees and third parties are aware of the requirements and procedures set in the Corporate Compliance Program. Students will also be exposed to the latest methodologies that support compliance awareness such as, storytelling, comics, gamification, real life scenarios and e learning. Awareness is a key issue and major challenge for all organisations trying to mitigate compliance risks. Designing an efficient awareness campaign is the vital starting point. It is extremely important that compliance officers are well trained in these important tasks. They need to be able to develop an effective communication and training plan that will include all actors involved in the process and certainly third parties that interact with the organisation. Communicating the messages in the most efficient way is a major challenge. People are today overburden with information and tasks and focusing and concentration times is extremely low. This is the reason that several communication techniques, technologies and methodologies have to be considered and choose the most appropriate and suitable one for the culture and expectations of the working force.

Expected Learning Outcomes

By the end of this Module, students will be able to design and implement an effective training and communication strategic plan that will promote the Corporate Compliance Awareness Program. Students will also become aware of the latest methodologies and technologies that can support them in their effort to design and promote their Corporate Compliance Awareness Program.

Introductory Comments

Each organisation needs to develop a curriculum with content tailored to its specific compliance needs. When putting together a compliance awareness training program, the human and financial resources essential for constructing a robust approach to training and assessment need to be allocated. Importantly, the corporation must aim to strengthen its culture by ensuring important aspects of the compliance program are top of mind with its employees employees.

Any awareness program needs to improve in the essential task of delivering the right message to the right audience at the right time. While this may seem obvious, it is common practice for many companies not to take the time to develop an awareness plan for their compliance program. To create a best-practice plan, they following factors should be taken into account:

- Message Prioritisation: What messages need to be delivered and to whom? Targeting the right message to the right audience is critical.

M.Sc. Governance, Risk and Compliance

- Choose the Right Timing: Coordinate the ethics and compliance message with other corporate initiatives. Avoiding the end-of-the-month crunch times when stress is high and time is short is particularly helpful.
- Diversify Communications & Awareness Formats: Not everyone will respond to the same media (emails, presentations, board notifications, face-to-face, etc).
- Employee training. Although corporate training is a key component of anti-fraud policies and procedures, it is often perceived as dull by employees. To motivate greater engagement, firms are experimenting with training that involves elements of digital games, known as gamification.

WEEK 7_Legal Defence

Objective

The objective of this Module is to assist students understand and appreciate the importance of a Forensic compliance investigations and whistleblowing system across jurisdictions.

Students will be explained the roadblocks and implementation techniques of a forensic investigation and a whistleblowing system. They will also be introduced to forensic investigation procedures, the investigation matrix and the effective structure of a forensic team.

The investigation of fraud, corruption and other economic crime requires a thorough and diligent approach. Developing an appropriate and efficient whistle blowing system is one of the most important defensive mechanisms an organisation has in meeting the challenge of managing compliance risks. This is not an easy task and requires careful design and excellent communication abilities and skills. There are many issues and obstacles that require careful evaluation and consideration. Avoiding proper attention to these factors may lead to failure of the whole system. Nothing can certainly be implemented unless the organisation develops the infrastructure for the existence of a well-trained forensic team. This team must be well trained and have adequate knowledge of both the technical and the soft issues involved. Proper procedures and methodologies must certainly exist and be effectively used.

Expected Learning Outcomes

By the end of the Module students will be able to understand the legal background of and design an effective whistleblowing system. They will also be in a position to understand the concept of forensic investigations, procedures investigation matrix.

M.Sc. Governance, Risk and Compliance

Introductory comments

Forensics are considered to be the scientific methods used to solve a crime. Forensic investigation is the gathering and analysis of all crime-related physical evidence in order to come to a conclusion about a suspect. Investigators in conventional crimes will look at blood, fluid, or fingerprints, residue, hard drives, computers, or other technology to establish how a crime took place. This is however a general definition, though, since there are a number of different types of forensics.

For example, financial forensics is a field that combines criminal investigation skills with financial auditing skills to identify criminal financial activity coming from within or outside of an organization. Financial forensics may be used in prevention, detection, and recovery activities to investigate terrorism and other criminal activity, provide oversight to private-sector and government organizations, and assess organizations' vulnerability to fraudulent activities.

A whistleblower (also written as whistle-blower or whistle blower) is a person who exposes any kind of information or activity that is deemed illegal, unethical, or not correct within an organization that is either private or public. Whistleblower policies are critical tools for protecting individuals who report activities believed to be illegal, dishonest, unethical, or otherwise improper. The whistleblower is not responsible for investigating the activity or for determining fault or corrective measures; appropriate management officials are charged with these responsibilities.

Whistleblower protections are provided in two important areas: (1) confidentiality and (2) against retaliation. Insofar as possible, the confidentiality of the whistleblower will be maintained. However, identity may have to be disclosed to conduct a thorough investigation, to comply with the law and to provide accused individuals their legal rights of defense. The Company will not retaliate against a whistleblower. This includes, but is not limited to, protection from retaliation in the form of an adverse employment action such as termination, compensation decreases, or poor work assignments and threats of physical harm. Any whistleblower who believes he/she is being retaliated against must contact the Head of Human Resources. Importantly, The right of a whistleblower for protection against retaliation does not include immunity for any personal wrongdoing that is alleged and investigated.

WEEK 8&9_ Compliance with Anti-Money Laundering and Countering the Financing of Terrorism Laws

Objective

Organisations and particularly those related to certain vulnerable products and markets need to comply with increasingly more and stricter anti money laundering and countering the financing of terrorism regulation. The Module provides an overview of the basic concepts, international initiatives and draws a comparative study of the law in relevant financial centers in the EU, US and UK, as well as on the FATF Recommendations, thus offering a European and international perspective. The students will learn which products and services are the most vulnerable. The students will understand the role of the Compliance function and of the Compliance Officer in this area, the obligations of affected organisations, the due diligence measures and internal procedures which need to be place by organisations. Finally, the sanctions are presented.

Expected Learning Outcomes

By the end of these weeks you will gain knowledge on the following subjects:

Basic Concepts:

- Why and how is money laundered?
- The money laundering three stage process and why the Traditional Model of Money Laundering is Obsolete
- What is terrorism?
- How is terrorism financed?

Introductory Comments

Money laundering is the generic term used to describe the process by which criminals disguise the original ownership and control of the proceeds of criminal conduct by making such proceeds appear to have derived from a legitimate source.

The processes by which criminally derived property may be laundered are extensive. Though criminal money may be successfully laundered without the assistance of the financial sector, the reality is that hundreds of billions of dollars of criminally derived money is laundered through financial institutions, annually. The nature of the services and products offered by the financial services industry (namely managing, controlling and possessing money and property belonging to others) means that it is vulnerable to abuse by money launderers.

Terrorist financing is the process by which terrorists fund their operations in order to perform terrorist acts. Terrorists need financial support to carry out their activities and to achieve their goals. There is little difference between terrorists and other criminals in their abuse of the financial system. While different from money laundering, terrorists often exploit similar weaknesses in the financial system.

In December 2015, both the Council of the EU and the European Council called for the existing EU rules on terrorist financing and money laundering. to be strengthened.

M.Sc. Governance, Risk and Compliance

The new rules aim to:

- prevent the use of the financial system for the funding of criminal activities
- strengthen transparency rules to prevent the large-scale concealment of funds

The directive adopted in May 2018 was further complemented by new criminal law provisions, adopted in October 2018.

In December 2018, the Council adopted conclusions on an action plan to better tackle money laundering and terrorist financing.

Amending directive 2015/849, the agreed text aims to:

- improve transparency in the ownership of companies and trusts
- strengthen checks on risky third countries
- address risks linked to prepaid cards and virtual currencies
- enhance cooperation between the national financial intelligence units

The new legislative framework seeks to balance the need for increased security with the protection of fundamental rights and economic freedoms.

The directive is part of a Commission action plan against terrorist financing, established in 2016 following a spate of terrorist attacks in Europe.

International Economic Sanctions have become a central instrument in global governance over the past decades, employed by both sovereign states and international organisations. More recently, there has been a shift towards ‘smart’ or targeted sanctions that aim for the political and economic elites of targeted countries (e.g. through asset freezes and travel bans) rather than a more comprehensive sanctions approach (as large-scale trade or oil embargoes) that has detrimental effects on civilian populations. In the era of financial globalisation such ‘smart’ sanctions entail increased compliance obligations both for state institutions and private organisations which if not met carry significant fines and penalties.

WEEK 10_ Compliance and Economic Crime (White Collar Crime, Bribery and Corruption)

Objective

This Module considers the economic crimes committed by or against an individual an organisation. The best compliance techniques and anti-bribery principles are presented as well as an anti-bribery policy, systems and controls which needs to be in place in order to manage and control the risk and protect the organisation and individuals from fraud. Particularly vulnerable is the financial sector and corruption lessons from recent major bribery Investigations are presented. This Module tries to bring everything taught so far together for compliance in the previous Modules in relation to Economic Crime. The students will be able to asses the total risk in an organisation and explain the importance of due diligence and monitoring of the Compliance function to mitigate the risk.

Expected Learning Outcomes

By the end of this week you will:

- Familiarize yourself with the basic concepts
- Understand the basic goals and contents of an Anti-bribery policy
- Familiarize yourself with the relevant OECD/G20 anti-bribery convention and guidelines
- Gain knowledge on the applicable Legislation and Regulation from various jurisdictions: Bribery Act 2010 (UK), FCPA, Wolfsberg anti-bribery and corruption programme
- Understand the risk and gain lessons from major bribery Investigations.

Introductory Comments

White-collar crime is nonviolent crime committed for financial gain. According to the FBI (Link) the term white-collar crime is now synonymous with the full range of frauds committed by business and government professionals. These crimes are characterized by deceit, concealment, or violation of trust and are not dependent on the application or threat of physical force or violence. The motivation behind these crimes is financial—to obtain or avoid losing money, property, or services or to secure a personal or business advantage. These are not victimless crimes. A single scam can destroy a company, devastate families by wiping out their life savings, or cost investors vast amounts of money (or even all three). Examples of white-collar crimes include securities fraud, embezzlement, corporate fraud, and money laundering.

Bribery according to Transparency International (Link) is the offering, promising, giving, accepting or soliciting of an advantage as an inducement for an action which is illegal, unethical or a breach of trust. Inducements can take the form of gifts, loans, fees, rewards or other advantages (taxes, services, donations, favours etc.). Governments need to take effective action in the fight against international bribery both at the national level and through international groups including the G20, European Union, UN and the OECD. All national legislation should outlaw bribery between firms in the private sector.

The OECD Anti-Bribery Convention establishes legally binding standards to criminalise bribery of foreign public officials in international business transactions and provides for a host of related measures that make this effective. It is the first and only international anti-corruption instrument focused on the 'supply side' of the bribery transaction. Parties to the Anti-Bribery Convention have agreed to put in place new measures that will reinforce their efforts to prevent, detect and investigate foreign bribery with the adoption of the OECD Recommendation for Further Combating Bribery of Foreign Public Officials in International Business Transactions.

Transparency International is the global civil society organisation leading the fight against corruption. It is an international non-governmental organization which is based in Berlin, Germany, and was founded in 1993. Its nonprofit purpose is to take action to combat global corruption with civil societal anti-corruption measures and to prevent criminal activities arising from corruption.

According to the European Commission (Link) corruption is the abuse of power for private gain. Corruption takes many forms, such as bribery, trading in influence, abuse of functions, but can also hide behind nepotism, conflicts of interest, or revolving doors between the public and the private sectors. Its effects are serious and widespread. Corruption constitutes a threat to security, as an enabler for crime and terrorism. It acts as a drag on economic growth, by creating business uncertainty, slowing processes, and imposing additional costs. Although the nature and scope of corruption may differ from one EU State to another, it harms the EU as a whole by lowering investment levels, hampering the fair operation of the Internal Market and reducing public finances.

WEEK 11_Compliance with Data Protection Laws

Objective

All organisations deal with personal data of either clients or employees on a daily basis and on the same time applicable laws impose heavy compliance burdens on organisations and data controllers and provide increased rights to data subjects. This Module considers the General Data Protection Regulation (EU) 2016/679 (GDPR) on data protection and privacy for all individual citizens of the European Union (EU) and the European Economic Area (EEA). This Module aims to provide the students with the skills and knowledge to deal with an increasingly complex framework.

Learning Outcomes

At the end of this section the students will be able to present the international legal framework of the United Nations about data privacy. They will be able to present the basic requirements arising from the European Union protection Law, to describe the term of personal data and the main aspects of the concept of personal data.

The students will be able to describe the requirements in order to be able to legally process and transfer data and deal with data breaches. They will be able to describe how they can promote compliance through records of processing activities, data protection impact assessment and prior consultation.

Finally, the students will be able to describe the term cybercrime, the obligations arising from the EU legal framework against cybercrime and the risks of non-compliance.

Keywords:

- Personal data
- Data processing concept
- Automated and non-automated data processing
- Users of personal data: controllers and processors
- Recipients and third parties
- Data protection by design and by default
- Supervision: the GDPR consistency mechanism
- Right to be forgotten
- Data portability

M.Sc. Governance, Risk and Compliance

- Right to lodge a complaint with a supervisory authority, right to an effective judicial remedy, liability and compensation, sanctions

Introductory Comments:

Personal data is any information that relates to an identified or identifiable living individual. Different pieces of information, which collected together can lead to the identification of a particular person, also constitute personal data.

A data processing system is a combination of machines, people, and processes that for a set of inputs produces a defined set of outputs. The inputs and outputs are interpreted as data, facts, information etc. depending on the interpreter's relation to the system.

Importantly, the EU GDPR has changed European privacy rules significantly. The introduction of the concepts 'Privacy by Design' and 'Privacy by Default' are two of these changes. Privacy by Design holds that organisations need to consider privacy at the initial design stages and throughout the complete development process of new products, processes or services that involve processing personal data. Privacy by default means that when a system or service includes choices for the individual on how much personal data he/she shares with others, the default settings should be the most privacy friendly ones.

Undoubtedly, GDPR is the most important change in data privacy regulation in 20 years. The GDPR overall aims primarily to give control to individuals over their personal data and to simplify the regulatory environment for international business by unifying the regulation within the EU. The regulation contains provisions and requirements related to the processing of personal data of individuals (formally called data subjects in the GDPR) inside the EEA, and applies to any enterprise established in the EEA or—regardless of its location and the data subjects' citizenship—that is processing the personal information of data subjects inside the EEA.

In practice, in the spring of 2018, the GDPR began requiring companies to:

- provide data breach notifications
- appoint a data-protection officer
- require user consent for data processing
- anonymize data for privacy

All companies operating within the EU must comply with these standards.

In order to contribute to the consistent application of this Regulation throughout the Union, the supervisory authorities are required to cooperate with each other and, where relevant, with the Commission, through the consistency mechanism as set out in Art. 63. That mechanism should in particular apply where a supervisory authority intends to adopt a measure intended to produce legal effects as regards processing operations which substantially affect a significant number of data subjects in several Member States. It should also apply where any supervisory authority concerned or the Commission requests that such matter should be handled in the consistency mechanism. 4That mechanism should be without prejudice to any measures that the Commission may take in the exercise of its powers under the Treaties.

The right to be forgotten is the response to the desire of individuals to determine the development of their life in an autonomous way, without being perpetually or periodically stigmatized as a consequence of a specific action performed in the past. The right to be forgotten is distinct from the right to privacy, due to the distinction that the right to privacy constitutes information that is not publicly known, whereas the right to be forgotten involves removing information that was publicly known at a certain time and not allowing third parties to access the information.

WEEK 12_IT Compliance: Information Security

Objective

With the increasing use and reliance on information technology, there is an urgent need for adequate measures of information security. Systematic information security management and the administration of security policy and plans are important for IT management in every organization. Various serious privacy and security breaches and attacks on IT systems have appeared in public and hence every organisation needs to safeguard physical and information assets. This Module looks at security standards which can be used as guideline or framework to develop and maintain an adequate information security management system (ISMS).

Learning Outcomes

At the end of this section the students will gain knowledge in the following subjects:

- Information Security- an introduction
- Administration of security policy and plans
- ISO 27001: Information Security Management Systems
- ISO 22301: Business Continuity Management Systems
- ISO 38500: governance and management of information technologies

Keywords:

- Information Security
- ISMS
- ISO 27001
- ISO 22301
- ISO 38500

Introductory Comments

Cybersecurity is a more general term that includes Information Security. Information Security refers exclusively to the processes and methodologies designed for data security, implemented to protect print, electronic, or any other form of confidential, private and sensitive information or data from unauthorized access, use, misuse, disclosure, destruction, modification, or disruption.

An Information Security Management System (ISMS) is a set of controls that an organisation implements to protect its own informational assets and other information assets for which it is responsible. Organizations that design and implement their own ISMS will find ways to reduce the likelihood of a data breach occurring, ways to limit their liability when a data breach does occur, and other ways to mitigate the impact of any data security issues.

The International Organization for Standardization (ISO) is a global body that collects and manages various standards for different disciplines. In today's world, with so many industries now reliant upon the internet and digital networks, more and more emphasis is being placed on the technology portions of ISO standards.

The ISO 27001 is an information security standard, part of the ISO/IEC 27000 family of standards, of which the last version was published in 2013, with a few minor updates since then. The standard is designed to function as a framework for an organization's ISMS. This includes all policies and processes relevant to how data is controlled and used. ISO 27001 does not mandate specific tools, solutions, or methods, but instead functions as a compliance checklist. In this article, we'll dive into how ISO 27001 certification works and why it would bring value to your organization.

ISO 22301 is a management systems standard for business continuity management (BCM) which can be used by organizations of all sizes and types. In general, BCM aims to assist companies in mitigating the effects of disruptive incidents. ISO 22301 emphasizes the need for a well-defined incident response structure. This ensures that when incidents occur, responses are escalated in a timely manner and people are empowered to take the necessary actions to be effective.

ISO/IEC 38500 provides guiding principles for members of governing bodies of organizations (which can comprise owners, directors, partners, executive managers, or similar) on the effective, efficient, and acceptable use of information technology (IT) within their organizations.

It also provides guidance to those advising, informing, or assisting governing bodies. These include the following:

- executive managers;
- members of groups monitoring the resources within the organization;
- external business or technical specialists, such as legal or accounting specialists, retail or industrial associations, or professional bodies;
- internal and external service providers (including consultants);
- auditors.

The purpose of ISO/IEC 38500:20015 is to promote effective, efficient, and acceptable use of IT in all organizations by

- assuring stakeholders that, if the principles and practices proposed by the standard are followed, they can have confidence in the organization's governance of IT,
- informing and guiding governing bodies in governing the use of IT in their organization, and
- establishing a vocabulary for the governance of IT.

WEEK 13 & 14_Applied Project – An assigned Case study on Compliance

Objective

This Module provides the opportunity to integrate the material taught from previous Modules. The students will need to assimilate the knowledge and skills developed and are required to work independently. The project will require students to act as professionals in the area of Compliance and will be asked to critically evaluate an existing compliance framework. They will also be asked to make recommendations on how to develop an optimal compliance model.

They will be challenged with specific questions and tasks that will require them to monitor, suggest and comment in all functions of the Compliance Risk function. Students will be required to support their initiatives and arguments using research for scientific knowledge and case studies from other organisations. The project requirements will be explained in a webinar and slide presentation by the instructor. Clear directions will be given, and students will be able to contact instructor at any time through emails.

Learning Outcomes

By the end of this Module students are expected to gain an in depth understanding of how compliance and risk functions work in organisations. They should also be able to create processes and set up such functions if needed in the future.

Risk Management

Objective

Risk affects every aspect of human life; we live with it every day and learn to manage its influence. In most cases this is done as an unstructured activity based on common sense. The critical process of identifying risks, assessing risks and developing strategies to manage risks is known as risk management. A risk management plan and a business impact analysis are important and crucial parts of a business' continuity plan. By understanding potential risks to business and finding ways to minimize their impacts, successful risk management affords a business an opportunity to thrive, grow and ultimately enjoy the fruits of success.

Despite it is not possible to control or manage 100% of risk, but knowing what to do before, during, and after an event will mitigate the damage and harm. Identifying potential hazards and risks and making it part of the day to day business is important. Safety should be the first priority as every business must face the reality of risks and hazards.

This module provides students with a framework to identify, assess, treat and respond to risks and opportunities at all levels of the organization. It covers accepted frameworks and techniques to manage business risks and exploit opportunities. After completing the course, students will be able to make better decisions in the increasingly uncertain business environment.

Intended Learning Outcomes

By the end of this module students will:

- Gain an in-depth understanding of risk management in the corporate environment
- Understand risk management
- Understand financial risk management
- Understand credit risk management
- Understand operational risk management
- Explore strategic risk management
- Analyse corporate risk strategy
- Quantify the risks involved in the business and avoid potential pitfalls
- Apply value-at-risk measurement techniques
- Understand the risk of accounting irregularities and how they impact a company

M.Sc. Governance, Risk and Compliance

- Identify and address credit risks within a business
- Evaluate new business opportunities
- Identify the risks associated with long-term contracts

Learning methods

- Material for upload: For each section a PowerPoint presentation as well as articles will be uploaded.
- Live Online Sessions: There will be a minimum of four meetings. The students will have the chance to ask questions and to discuss in detail the basic topics of each presentation. A case study will be provided for discussion
- Forum discussion: Every two weeks a forum discussion will be arranged where the participants in the session will have the chance to exchange their opinions on topics discussed in the lecture.
- Quiz: Every lecture a multiple-choice assessment will be conducted to help students understand the different topics and better prepare them for the formal assessments that will be shape their final course grade.
- Case Studies: Through the study of real-life cases the students will have the opportunity to practically apply the knowledge acquire at each lecture to enhance their understanding of the content.
- Academic Articles: For topics covered during the lecture
- Tutorials: Prerecorded videos explaining the module content

WEEK 1_The Concept of Risk and Uncertainty

Lecture Objectives

This first introductory lecture examines risk, its fundamental importance to a company and the sorts of risk that investors expect companies to take. This lecture outlines the basic concept of risk, opportunity and uncertainty by introducing students to the different sources and classification of risk.

Expected Learning Outcomes

By the end of this lecture students will be able to:

- Understand the concept of risk, uncertainty and opportunity
- Identify the sources/types of risk and uncertainty
- Understand the risk classification systems
- Discuss about the new global risks
- Understand the impact of risks on organizations
- Understand the attitudes of risk: Risk Tolerance, Risk and Language. Attitudes towards risk, Risk Appetite

M.Sc. Governance, Risk and Compliance

Introductory Remarks

Companies must take risks if they are to survive and prosper. In broad terms, risk involves exposure to some type of danger and the possibility of loss or injury. In general, risks can apply to physical health or job security. In finance and investing, risk often refers to the chance an outcome or investment's actual gains will differ from an expected outcome or return. Risk includes the possibility of losing some or all of an original investment.

Quantifiably, risk is usually assessed by considering historical behaviours and outcomes. In finance, standard deviation is a common metric associated with risk. Standard deviation provides a measure of the volatility of a value in comparison to its historical average.

Overall, it is possible and prudent to manage risks which makes understanding risks very important. Learning the risks that can apply to different scenarios and some of the ways to manage them holistically will help all types of investors and business managers to avoid unnecessary and costly losses.

The risk management function's primary responsibility is to understand the portfolio of risks that the company is currently taking and the risks it plans to take in the future. It must decide whether the risks are acceptable and, if they are not acceptable, what action should be taken.

Learning Activities

The activities are designed to assist you to study and to better comprehend the material taught.

1. Material Reading: lecture notes & Journals (Can be found on your CLASSE365 account)
2. After going through the material students must:
 - a. Based on the study material answer the following questions:
 - What are the three traditional core risk categories according to Maylor?

M.Sc. Governance, Risk and Compliance

- What we mean by risk tolerance?
 - What are the main sources of risk?
 - Explain how the financial risks can impact an organization.
 - What is the difference between systematic and nonsystematic risk? Which is more important to an equity investor? Which can lead to the bankruptcy of a corporation?
- b. Answer the multiple-choice quiz that can be found on the student CLASSE365 account.
- c. Case Study: Please use a company of your choice, make a list of all possible risk it faces and classify them properly.

WEEK 2 & 3 _ The Risk Management Process

Lecture Objectives

In business, some risk is always unavoidable – and, of course, taking risks often means better payout, growth, and success. The ability to assess and manage risk effectively is the key that differentiates recklessness from justified chances. The objective of these two lectures is to introduce students in the risk management process. More specifically, will demonstrate how a business can identify every potential aspect of risk and details the models and performance measures to manage them.

Expected Learning Outcomes

By the end of these lectures' students will be able to:

- Understand the evolution of risk management
- Understand the different risk management cycles
- Discuss the importance of risk management
- Identify and analyze risks
- Measure the risks
- Apply strategic management tools and techniques for analysing and evaluating organisational risks.
- Understand the principles-based approach
- Know the details of investment and capital expenditure risks
- Demonstrate an understanding of the roles and responsibilities across the organisation for managing risks

Introductory Remarks

All companies face risk; without risk, there is no reward. The flip side of this is that too much risk can lead to business failure. Risk management allows a balance to be struck between taking risks and reducing them.

Effective risk management can add value to any organization. In particular, companies operating in the investment industry rely heavily on risk management as the foundation that allows them to withstand market crashes.

An effective risk management framework seeks to protect an organization's capital base and earnings without hindering growth. Furthermore, investors are more willing to invest in companies with good risk management practices. This generally results in lower borrowing costs, easier access to capital for the firm and improved long-term performance.

M.Sc. Governance, Risk and Compliance

There are at least five crucial components that must be considered when creating a risk management framework. They include:

- Risk identification
- Risk measurement and assessment
- Risk mitigation
- Risk reporting and monitoring
- Risk governance

Risk Identification

The first step in identifying the risks a company faces is to define the risk universe. The risk universe is simply a list of all possible risks. Examples include IT risk, operational risk, regulatory risk, legal risk, political risk, strategic risk, and credit risk.

After listing all possible risks, the company can then select the risks to which it is exposed and categorize them into core and non-core risks. Core risks are those that the company must take in order to drive performance and long-term growth. Non-core risks are often not essential and can be minimized or eliminated completely.

Risk Measurement

Risk measurement provides information on the quantum of either a specific risk exposure or an aggregate risk exposure, and the probability of a loss occurring due to those exposures. When measuring specific risk exposure, it is important to consider the effect of that risk on the overall risk profile of the organization.

Some risks may provide diversification benefits while others may not. Another important consideration is the ability to measure an exposure. Some risks may be easier to measure than others. For example, market risk can be measured using observed market prices, but measuring operational risk is considered both an art and a science.

Specific risk measures often give the profit and loss ("P/L") impact that can be expected if there is a small change in that risk. They may also provide information on how volatile the P/L can be. For example, the equity risk of a stock investment can be measured as the P/L impact of the stock as a result of a 1-unit change in, say, the S&P500 index or as the standard deviation of the particular stock.

Common aggregate risk measures include value-at-risk (VaR), earnings-at-risk (EaR), and economic capital. Techniques such as scenario analysis and stress testing can be used to supplement these measures.

Risk Mitigation

Having categorized and measured its risks, a company can then decide on which risks eliminating or minimize, and how much of its core risks to retain. Risk mitigation can be achieved through an outright sale of assets or liabilities, buying insurance, hedging with derivatives, or diversification.

M.Sc. Governance, Risk and Compliance

Risk Reporting and Monitoring

It is important to report regularly on specific and aggregate risk measures in order to ensure that risk levels remain at an optimal level. Financial institutions that trade daily will produce daily risk reports. Other institutions may require less frequent reporting. Risk reports must be sent to risk personnel who have that authority to adjust (or instruct others to adjust) risk exposures.

Risk Governance

Risk governance is the process that ensures all company employees perform their duties in accordance with the risk management framework. Risk governance involves defining the roles of all employees, segregating duties and assigning authority to individuals, committees and the board for approval of core risks, risk limits, exceptions to limits and risk reports, and also for general oversight.

The bottom line of this process is the fact that effective risk management plays a crucial role in any company's pursuit of financial stability and superior performance. The adoption of a risk management framework that embeds best practices into the firm's risk culture can be the cornerstone of an organizations' financial future.

These two courses will detail all the above and provide a well-developed knowledge of all the step necessary to establish a proper and effective risk management process.

Learning Activities

The activities are designed to assist you to study and to better comprehend the material taught.

1. Material Reading: lecture notes & Journals (Can be found on your CLASSE365 account)
2. After going through the material students must:
 - a. Based on the study material answer the following questions:
 - What the five steps of risk management process?
 - State and explain three tools that can be used to manage risks.
 - State and explain three techniques that can be used to measure risks.
 - Explain how an organization can make its risk management process more effective.
 - Explain the 4 T's of the risk exposure identification process.
 - During which stage of risk planning are risks prioritized based on probability and impact?

M.Sc. Governance, Risk and Compliance

- How often does the company refresh its assessment of the most important risks?
 - Explain the usefulness of risk register.
 - Suggest three ways a company can ensure that there is an effective balance between risk and controls.
 - Suggest three ways a company can involve stakeholders to the risk management process.
- b. Answer the multiple-choice quiz that can be found on the student CLASSE365 account.
- c. Case Study: Please use a company of your choice, make a list of all possible risk it faces and classify them properly.

WEEK 4 _ The Internal Control Strategic Plan (Policies and Procedures)

Lecture Objectives

The objective of this module is to train students to identify the control measures required to prevent, mitigate or eradicate risks. The students will learn to implement a code of conduct, draft specific policies and financial control measures and design an effective program to screen, monitor and contract third parties to detect potential legal and reputational risks.

Intended Learning Outcomes

By the end of this lecture students will be able to:

- Identify the control measures required prevent, mitigate and control risks
- Draft policies and financial control measures
- Design an effective program screen to monitor and contract legal and reputational risks to third parties.
- Apply the knowledge of how to develop an enterprise risk management (ERM) framework.
- Explain to management the benefits of an enterprise –wide approach to risk and internal control.
- Link risk management and internal control into the business planning process.

Introductory Remarks

Control measures are perhaps the most important aspect of a proper compliance risk management program. Developing and successfully implementing a code of conduct assorted with well-designed policies and measures is of critical importance. Nothing however is useful and effective unless it is properly monitored, assessed and modified if and when necessary. Compliance risk is a dynamic issue and needs constant screening, new regulations and laws add additional pressure in re designing and implementing corrective actions. Compliance officers should seriously consider, in addition to financial and legal consequences the issue of reputational risk. This risk can sometime prove to be extremely more serious and damaging than other types of risks.

Additionally, designing and implementing an effective system of internal control can be challenging, and adapting to rapidly changing business models, new technologies, or globalization requires that system to be agile. An internal control system requires the use of judgment to monitor and assess its effectiveness, and it must provide insight on the application of controls.

This lecture, offers students the opportunity to develop a thorough knowledge in designing, implementing, and conducting an internal control system in an effective manner.

a. Based on the study material answer the following questions:

- What is the difference between policies and procedures? Give three examples for each.
- Explain the importance of internal controls.
- State three examples of internal controls failure.
- Explain the link between internal controls and risk management process.
- What Is the control environment?
- What is meant by monitoring?
- Is there a relationship between internal control objectives and components?
- Discuss how technology affects the internal controls of an organization.
- How would you identify the control measures required to prevent, mitigate or eradicate the major risks in your organization? Describe the steps you would take.
- List some financial control measures and specific policies to be included in a Code of Conduct in an organization.
- What would you consider prior to outsourcing to a third party the detection of legal and reputational risk of a Bank?
- Who should be involved in the development of measures and procedures?
- How can you say if a control measure is appropriate and efficient?

WEEK 5 & 6 _ The Process of Risk Assessment & Measurement

Lecture Objectives

This lecture covers the techniques for assessing risk within an organization. The objective of this module is to help students understand risk assessment indicators such as industry, geography, size, culture etc. and be able to build a risk assessment framework and methodology. Students will be trained to conduct a corporation's risk assessment, using all the necessary tools and techniques, and perform all the procedures suggested to ensure that all the risks faced by the organization are not only controlled, but reduced within the margins of the organization's risk tolerance.

Intended Learning Outcomes

By the end of this week you will be able to:

- Understand risk assessment indicators and their use
- Contact and present risk assessments using risk maps
- Determine the corporation's "Risk Appetite "
- Understand reactive, predictive and proactive risk management
- Get equipped with the knowledge and skills that will enable you to introduce a system for the conduct of risk assessments at the workplace and the process of managing the risk assessments.
- Define VAR and explain how it is used to quantify risk
- Measure Value at Risk using various methods
- Familiarize yourself with the profile of major vendors of risk management systems available in the market
- Understand the benefits of Stress Testing as a complement to VaR
- Understand and apply advanced volatility and correlation models such as GARCH and EMWA
- Learn from the failures of Barings Bank, Orange County and Metallgesellschaft
- Apply VaR into the context of managing capital and making strategic decisions such as capital allocation

- Christoffersen, P.F. (2012), Elements of Financial Risk Management, Elsevier Inc.

Introductory Remarks

Risk management has become progressively more important for all corporations in the last few decades. Financial institutions in particular are finding they have to increase the resources they devote to risk management. Large “rogue trader” losses such as those at Barings Bank in 1995, Allied Irish Bank in 2002, Société Générale in 2007, and UBS in 2011 would have been avoided if procedures used by the banks for collecting data on trading positions had been more carefully developed. Huge subprime losses at banks such as Citigroup, UBS, and Merrill Lynch would have been less severe if risk management groups had been able to convince senior management that unacceptable risks were being taken.

To this process, risk assessment is a very important process in any organization. In its general term it refers to overall processes, methods and techniques professionals employ in their effort to identify risks and dangers that can affect or damage in any way the organization. Once the risks are identified, they are ranked based on their importance and probability of occurring. Then is decided who and how can be affected by these risks and decide measures and controls that will mitigate these risks. Once the control system is setup there is a need for continuous evaluation and assessments in order to confirm their efficiency and take corrective actions as and if required.

Evaluating the financial impact and likelihood of each risk can be helpful when prioritizing the organization's risks. Identifying risk and control owners helps to clarify roles and responsibilities in the organization and promotes accountability. However, for the risk assessment process to be successful, you must consider what kind of reporting would speak to your management team. A risk assessment is only as useful as how it is being used and decisions are being made. The risk assessment process takes time to do well; therefore, you want to create output that is helpful to management. During this lecture, students will learn to apply all the available tools and techniques needed to assess the risk faced by the organization.

The risk assessment process is ongoing and should be revised over time. It can take several iterations before have a complete picture of the company's risks and truly understand the controls and processes that mitigate them. The outcome of the process gives management and its employees a better understanding of the company risk profile and the importance of the control environment in mitigating risk.

These two lectures set the scene. It starts by reviewing the classical arguments concerning the risk-return trade-offs faced by an investor who is choosing a portfolio of stocks and bonds. It then considers whether the same arguments can be used by a company in choosing new projects and managing its risk exposure. The lectures conclude that there are reasons why companies—particularly financial institutions - should be concerned with the total risk they face, not just with the risk from the viewpoint of a well-diversified shareholder.

WEEK 7_Financial Products & Risk

Lecture Objectives

Financial manager confronts risks associated with the underlying business and financial risks related to fluctuations in interest rates, exchange rates, stock, and commodity prices. Uncertainty in financial factors influences the future performance of a company; interest rate risk can affect the future value of a firm's assets and liabilities; exchange rate fluctuations affect the future costs of imports and dollar value of export revenues. By managing financial risks, a company can focus on its main activities and operations, rather than on forecasting interest rates, exchange rates, and future commodity prices.

In this lecture, students will learn that financial risks can be managed using derivative securities, so named because the future value of the security is derived from another asset, a commodity, or an economic variable. Examples of derivatives include forward contracts, futures, swaps, and options. Derivatives allow investors and corporations to hedge financial risks.

Expected Learning Outcomes

By the end of this lecture students will be able to:

- Understand the purpose, structure and functioning of financial markets
- Distinguish the major asset classes
- Analyse hedging transactions with forward and futures contracts
- Price and hedge options in the binomial model
- Estimate volatility of financial asset returns from historical data
- Price and hedge options in the Black-Scholes-Merton model

Introductory Remarks

In the last 40 years, derivatives have become increasingly important in finance. Futures and options are actively traded on many exchanges throughout the world. Many different types of forward contracts, swaps, options, and other derivatives are entered into by financial institutions, fund managers, and corporate treasurers in the over-the-counter market. Derivatives are added to bond issues, used in executive compensation plans, embedded in capital investment opportunities, used to transfer risks in mortgages from the original lenders to investors, and so on. We have now reached the stage where those who work in finance, and many who work outside finance, need to understand how derivatives work, how they are used, and how they are priced.

Whether you love derivatives or hate them, you cannot ignore them! The derivatives market is huge—much bigger than the stock market when measured in terms of underlying assets. The value of the assets underlying outstanding derivatives transactions is several times the world gross domestic product. As we shall see in this lecture, derivatives can be used for hedging or speculation or arbitrage. They play a key role in transferring a wide range of risks in the economy from one entity to another.

A derivative can be defined as a financial instrument whose value depends on (or derives from) the values of other, more basic, underlying variables. Very often the variables underlying derivatives are the prices of traded assets. A stock option, for example, is a derivative whose value is dependent on the price of a stock. However, derivatives can be dependent on almost any variable, from the price of hogs to the amount of snow falling at a certain ski resort.

WEEK 8_Financial Market Risk: Interest Rates Risk

Lecture Objectives

No company can escape interest rate risk and this lecture focuses on how interest rate sensitivity and its impact vary according to the type of company and business environment. The lecture provides appropriate responses to each different set of circumstances, introducing the science of the yield curve and the many instruments available for managing interest rate risk, explaining when each might be used. A proper response to this risk can only come following a full understanding of the context of the firm and its strategy, along with a full evaluation of the risk.

Expected Learning Outcomes

By the end of this lecture students will be able to:

- Understand the current best practices regarding the management of interest rate risk
- Learn how to use vital quantitative tools and metrics relating to the anticipation and mitigation of adverse developments in the interest rate environment
- To apply models that can be used for forecasting future direction of benchmark interest rates
- Quantitative methods for modelling changes in the term structure of interest rates
- Monitor money market spreads and volatility as precursors of changes in liquidity conditions
- Use the tools that are vital for stress testing and assessing the impact of adverse scenarios on the capital base and future earnings of an enterprise
- Understand the regulatory framework – Basel III and other public policy measures - that pertain to the management of interest rate risk
- Understand the dynamics of inflationary and deflationary forces in the global economy

Introductory Remarks

Interest rate risk is the possibility that the value of an investment will decline as the result of an unexpected change in interest rates. This risk is most commonly associated with an investment in a fixed-rate bond. When interest rates rise, the market value of the bond declines, since the rate being paid on the bond is now lower in relation to the current market rate. Consequently, investors will be less inclined to buy the bond; since demand declines, so too does the market price of the bond. This means that an investor holding such a bond would experience a capital loss. The loss is unrealized as long as the investor chooses to continue holding the bond and will be realized once the bond is sold or reaches its maturity date.

Shorter-term bonds have a lower interest rate risk, since there is a shorter period of time within which changes in interest rates can adversely impact the bonds. Conversely, there is a higher interest rate risk associated with longer-term bonds, since there may be many years within which an adverse interest rate fluctuation can occur. Since longer-term bonds have a higher interest rate risk associated with them, their expected rate of return is typically higher than the rate on shorter-term bonds, which is known as the maturity risk premium.

When a bond has a higher level of interest rate risk, its price will fluctuate more when there is an adverse change in the interest rate.

Interest rate risk can be mitigated, either by diversifying one's investments across a broad mix of security types, or by hedging. In the latter case, an investor can enter into an interest rate swap agreement with a third party, thereby offloading the risk of rate fluctuations onto the other party.

 - A bank quotes an interest rate of 14% per annum with quarterly compounding. What is the equivalent rate with (a) continuous compounding and (b) annual compounding?
 - What rate of interest with continuous compounding is equivalent to 15% per annum with monthly compounding?
 - A deposit account pays 12% per annum with continuous compounding, but interest is actually paid quarterly. How much interest will be paid each quarter on a $10,000 deposit?

- A 3-year bond provides a coupon of 8% semiannually and has a cash price of 104. What is the bond's yield?
- 10-year 8% coupon bond currently sells for $90. A 10-year 4% coupon bond currently sells for $80. What is the 10-year zero rate? (Hint: Consider taking a long position in two of the 4% coupon bonds and a short position in one of the 8% coupon bonds.)
- “When the zero curve is upward sloping, the zero rate for a particular maturity is greater than the par yield for that maturity. When the zero curve is downward sloping the reverse is true.” Explain why this is so.
- Why are US Treasury rates significantly lower than other rates that are close to risk-free?
- Why does a loan in the repo market involve very little credit risk?
- bank can borrow or lend at LIBOR. The 2-month LIBOR rate is 0.28% per annum with continuous compounding. Assuming that interest rates cannot be negative, what is the arbitrage opportunity if the 3-month LIBOR rate is 0.1% per year with continuous compounding. How low can the 3-month LIBOR rate become without an arbitrage opportunity being created?
- A bank can borrow or lend at LIBOR. Suppose that the 6-month rate is 5% and the 9-month rate is 6%. The rate that can be locked in for the period between 6 months and 9 months using an FRA is 7%. What arbitrage opportunities are open to the bank? All rates are continuously compounded.
- An interest rate is quoted as 5% per annum with semiannual compounding. What is the equivalent rate with (a) annual compounding, (b) monthly compounding, and (c) continuous compounding?

WEEK 9_Financial Market Risk: Liquidity Risk

Lecture Objectives

The Foreign Exchange markets have never been busier, or more volatile and riskier. This lecture looks at the foreign exchange markets, and how to manage currency risk, from a professional, practical perspective. This lecture explains the different types of foreign exchange risk that can affect a company and how each might be evaluated and responded to. It recognizes that foreign exchange risk may be fundamental to the company and that an appropriate response needs to be drawn up for each type of risk in the context of a company's broader business and shareholder objectives. It introduces instruments available for managing risk, together with techniques for their use, giving extensive choice to business managers on how to respond to foreign exchange risk.

Expected Learning Outcomes

By the end of this lecture students will be able to:

- Describe the Impact and Importance of Foreign Exchange Risk Management
- Identify the Types and Sources of Foreign Exchange Risk
- Apply Basic Risk Management on Foreign Exchange Exposure
- Locate Foreign Exchange and Money Market Price, Rates, Fixings and Analytics on Trading Terminals/Platforms
- Interpret Volatility and Correlation Data
- Analyse Macroeconomic Variables and their Effects on Foreign Exchange Risk
- Interpret Central Bank Policy Rates, Bias and Statements

Introductory Remarks

Foreign exchange risk arises when a company engages in financial transactions denominated in a currency other than the currency where that company is based. Any appreciation / depreciation of the base currency or the depreciation / appreciation of the denominated currency will affect the cash flows emanating from that transaction. Foreign exchange risk can also affect investors, who trade in international markets, and businesses engaged in the import / export of products or services to multiple countries.

The proceeds of a closed trade, whether it's a profit or loss, will be denominated in the foreign currency and will need to be converted back to the investor's base currency. Fluctuations in the exchange rate could adversely affect this conversion resulting in a lower than expected amount.

An import / export business exposes itself to foreign exchange risk by having account payables and receivables affected by currency exchange rates. This risk originates when a contract between two parties specifies exact prices for goods or services, as well as delivery dates. If a currency's value fluctuates between when the contract is signed and the delivery date, it could cause a loss for one of the parties.

There are three types of foreign exchange risk this lecture will examine:

Transaction risk: This is the risk that a company faces when it's buying a product from a company located in another country. The price of the product will be denominated in the selling company's currency. If the selling company's currency were to appreciate versus the buying company's currency, then the company doing the buying will have to make a larger payment in its base currency to meet the contracted price.

Translation risk: A parent company owning a subsidiary in another country could face losses when the subsidiary's financial statements, which will be denominated in that country's currency, have to be translated back to the parent company's currency.

Economic risk: Also called forecast risk, refers to when a company's market value is continuously impacted by an unavoidable exposure to currency fluctuations.

This lecture will overview the foreign exchange market, the available products and the internal and external techniques available to manage the foreign exchange risk.

WEEK 10_ Financial risk: Liquidity

Lecture Objectives

Organizations that fail to manage their liquid resources appropriately expose themselves to a higher risk of failure than organizations that effectively manage their liquid resources. This lecture is designed to equip students not only with an understanding of the theoretical principles of good liquidity management but also with associated practical skill.

These skills include being able to extract relevant data from a range of sources to forecast income and expenditure and to use these forecasts, together with information on expected payment patterns, to undertake the preparation and revision of cash budgets. It is important that students can also analyse a range of information on borrowing and investing options and make appropriate recommendations to management which adhere to organizational policy.

Expected Learning Outcomes:

By the end of this lecture students will be able to:

- Use statistical techniques and financial information to prepare forecasts of income and expenditure.
- Prepare cash budgets.
- Use cash budgets to monitor cash flow within the organisation.
- Manage cash balances effectively.
- Raise finance in accordance with organisational requirements.
- Invest surplus funds observing organisational policies.
- Understand the issues relating to liquidity risk management
- Define the sources and types of liquidity risk and how it is measured
- Understand the need for intraday liquidity and how it is regulated
- Evaluate the potential impact of liquidity risk on Return on Equity
- Use a structured approach to assess liquidity risk management, asset and liability management and funding strategy

Introductory Remarks

Liquidity is dynamic and can change according to both business and market conditions. These conditions can be both expected and unexpected and will give rise to the need to ensure adequate liquidity to cover all events. In the event that a business faces a cash flow crisis, then the consequences can be wide-ranging, especially for a business operating in the financial industry.

The potential issues faced could include (but are not limited to):

- impact on supply of goods or services due to inability to meet payment terms
- inability to meet capital expansion plans
- breaching bank loan covenants
- increase in penalties for non-payments and late payments, such as tax obligations etc.
- breaching legal requirements including non-payment of payroll, superannuation and similar obligations
- recall of loan funds due to non-payment of interest and fee commitments
- insolvency / bankruptcy

M.Sc. Governance, Risk and Compliance

A business with adequate liquidity has less risk of being unable to meet their obligations than an illiquid one. Where a business has adequate liquidity, there is also the possibility of improved profitability through reduced interest expense or increased interest income, together with greater financial flexibility to negotiate enhanced terms with suppliers and financiers or participate in new business opportunities.

Cash flow is an integral part of everyday operations. The root cause of many business failures stems from the inadequate management of available cash, the lack of available cash resources, or lack of access to appropriate financing facilities.

Students develop both an understanding of, and the skills necessary to ensure, the on-going liquidity of an organisation. Students will demonstrate that they are able to prepare and use cash budgets to assist with the treasury function of an organisation and are able to make informed decisions regarding the borrowing and investing of funds without affecting the day to day liquidity.

WEEK 11 & 12_Credit Risk Measurement and Management

Lecture Objectives

Imagine that you are a bank and a main part of your daily business is to lend money. Unfortunately, lending money is a risky business - there is no 100% guarantee that you will get all your money back. If the borrower defaults, you will face losses in your portfolio. Or, in a bit less extreme scenario, if the credit quality of your counterparty deteriorates according to some rating system, the loan will become more risky. These are typical situations in which credit risk manifests itself.

According to the Basel Accord, a global regulation framework for financial institutions, credit risk is one of the three fundamental risks a bank or any other regulated financial institution has to face when operating in the markets (the two other risks being market risk and operational risk). A correct understanding of credit risk and the ability to manage it are fundamental in today's world.

The lecture examines the origins of credit risk, its manifestations and its consequences. It discusses tools and techniques to manage and mitigate credit risk. It provides students with a clear understanding of what best practice credit risk management is and how it can support the achievement of business goals by ensuring that credit risks are only accepted where within risk appetite and that credit risks are effectively managed thereafter.

Expected Learning Outcomes

By the end of this lecture students will be able to:

- Appreciate the importance of the credit cycle
- Have a better understanding of the current state of the credit markets
- Gauge company performance using ratio analysis
- Understand the relationship between qualitative and quantitative aspects of credit analysis
- Understand the importance of valuation in credit analysis
- Become familiar with various market tools
- Be conversant with various valuation models
- Sharpen forecasting skills
- The most recent risk regulations for banks: Basel II and Basel III
- How to critically use basic measures of risk

Introductory Remarks:

Credit risk management has been a keystone of prudent traditional banking for thousands of years. Bankers have to consider the risks and expected profits in order to decide to whom and how much to lend. When a loan is granted, there must be monitoring and communication with the borrower, in particular in the case of financial distress or simple unwillingness to repay. These decisions used to be based on experience and expertise, but with the advance of modern mathematical, statistical, and computational tools the discipline has become increasingly sophisticated. Credit risk is not only managed, but also priced and measured using various accurate mathematical and statistical tools and models. The credit risk management decisions must be now based on the results of exact pricing and measurement.

The growth of consumer credit in the last 50 years would hardly have been possible without automatically operated credit scoring. Credit scoring developed using various classification or regression methods, in particular with logistic regression, has become an industry standard accepted as an accurate credit risk assessment tool, often performing better than human credit risk officers. The scoring measures the credit risk not only by using a score discriminating between better and worse loan applications, but also by estimating the probability of default within one year or another given time horizon. The risk can be also priced by calculating the risk premium that should be part of the loan interest rate in order to cover properly the expected credit losses.

Moreover, the complexity of credit risk modelling has increased with the advance of financial derivatives, which essentially always involve counterparty credit risk. Assessment of the counterparty credit risk is essentially impossible to separate from the market risk analysis. Credit risk is directly priced into credit derivatives, whose value depends on one or more reference credit entities. The credit derivatives and related asset backed securities became popular at the end of the nineties and at the beginning of the previous decade. Nevertheless, the global financial crisis has shown that the complexity of their pricing has been seriously underestimated, and the market has become much more cautious with respect to these products since then.

The main goal of these two lectures is to cover the most important historically developed areas of credit risk management, pricing, and measurement as outlined above, but also to focus on the latest developments and research.

WEEK 13 & 14_Operational Risk Management

Lecture Outline

These two lectures will help students develop an understanding of the importance of operational risk management and build an appreciation for the impact operational risk can have. The focus is on the practical implication of operational risk, rather than just the theory. To this end, real-world examples and case studies are used throughout. The aim is that students not only complete the lectures with a better understanding of operational risk, but also how better to manage it.

Intended Learning Outcomes

- Explain the role of operational risk management.
- Understand the governance structures, systems, procedures and cultural aspects necessary for an organization to successfully manage operational risk.
- Identify the sources of operational risk and how these arise within the business' main activities
- Build a knowledge of the main techniques for the measurement and quantification of operational risk and their relative merits and drawbacks.
- Understand and know how to use the key operational risk tools.
- Describe the impact of regulation on operational risk.

Introductory Remarks

Operational risk focuses on how things are accomplished within an organization and not necessarily what is produced or inherent within an industry. These risks are often associated with active decisions relating to how the organization functions and what it prioritizes. While the risks are not guaranteed to result in failure, lower production, or higher overall costs, they are seen as higher or lower depending on various internal management decisions.

Because it reflects man-made procedures and thinking processes, operational risk can be summarized as a human risk; it is the risk of business operations failing due to human error. It changes from industry to industry and is an important consideration to make when looking at potential investment decisions. Industries with lower human interaction are likely to have lower operational risk.

For example, one area that may involve operational risk is the maintenance of necessary systems and equipment. If two maintenance activities are required, but it is determined that only one can be afforded at the time, making the choice to perform one over the other alters the operational risk depending on which system is left in disrepair. If a system fails, the negative impact is associated directly with the operational risk.

Other areas that qualify as operational risk tend to involve the personal element within the organization. If a sales-oriented business chooses to maintain a subpar sales staff, due to its lower salary costs or any other factor, this behavior is considered an operational risk. The same can be said for failing to properly maintain a staff to avoid certain risks. In a manufacturing company, for example, choosing not to have a qualified mechanic on staff, and having to rely on third parties for that work, can be classified as an operational risk. Not only does this impact the smooth functioning of a system, but it also involves additional time delays.

The willing participation of employees in fraudulent activity may also be seen as operational risk. In this case, the risk involves the possibility of repercussions if the activity is uncovered. Since individuals make an active decision to commit fraud, it is considered a risk relating to how the business operates.

Although operational risk is still considered to be the “new kid on the block” by many people, it’s still the category of risk most likely to impact your organisation unexpectedly and often in a major way. Some notorious examples underline the importance of proper operational risk management:

Trader Pleaded Guilty to Fraud

Nick Leeson was a former derivatives trader whose unauthorised and unsupervised trading on the Singapore International Money Exchange caused the collapse of what was at the time the United Kingdom’s oldest investment bank, Baring’s Bank. An audit in February 1995 uncovered losses that amounted to more than GBP 800 million, almost the entire assets of the bank. Dozens of executives who were implicated in the failure to control Leeson resigned or were sacked. Leeson pleaded guilty to fraud and was sentenced to six and a half years in prison. A similar incident happened at Société Générale where an unsupervised trading loss incident in January 2008 caused the bank to lose approximately EUR 4.9 billion.

Westpac’s Costly Mistake

According to the Herald Sun, in June 2009, Westpac had mistakenly sent a fax authorising a transfer of NZD 3.47 million into a computer firm’s account, even though the actual amount owed was only NZD 34,680. A Westpac spokesperson put the mistake down to a “simple typing error” when sending the fax. Westpac made a very similar but costlier data processing error only one month earlier when an NZD 8 million transfer was made instead of NZD 80,645. In that case, the account holders fled with the money and Westpac wasn’t able to recover all of its losses.

Barclays Technology Crash

In June 2009, UK-based Barclays PLC experienced a technology breakdown that left millions of customers, primarily in the South of England, unable to withdraw money from ATMs for most of the afternoon. Barclay’s internet and telephone banking services were also impacted and a small number of customers experienced difficulty using their cards to make payments at retailers’ payments at retailers.

Squirrel Brings Down the NASDAQ

In August of 1994, the NASDAQ market had to close for more than half an hour, losing valuable trading time, as an energetic squirrel had gnawed through the power lines supplying the stock market’s computer centre in Trumbull, Connecticut. The system failed to perform the automatic switchover to the temporary backup power supply and consequently the market was down for 34 minutes.

The aim of these lectures is to provide students with an introduction to operational risk management,

M.Sc. Governance, Risk and Compliance

the tools used in the process, and how operational risk management fits into the wider risk management of the firm. Additionally, these lectures will expose students to some of the above and some other cases involving operational risk realization with the objective to help them understand the importance, nature, and diversity of operational risk.

Emerging Technologies and the Law

Objective

This module focuses on how emerging and disruptive technologies are bringing about a fundamental shift in regulation, decision-making and shaping a way of how the modern business operates.

The first element of the course will offer a background to the regulation of the Internet and emerging technologies. We will look at key regulatory theories and regulatory efforts in select jurisdictions (UK, EU, US, Cyprus). This will provide a solid base for candidates to understand specific challenges posed by emerging technologies considered later in the course.

The second part will examine privacy and data protection risks of emerging technologies. We will explore key theories of privacy, human rights aspects of privacy, before assessing data protection in more detail. In particular, we will explore the electronic privacy regime in the EU and the concept of online behavioural advertising.

In the third part, we will look at the growing use of Artificial Intelligence platforms. This part of the course will consider the benefits of automation for both internal efficiency and productivity of the business and managing client expectation. It looks at various technologies as components of Artificial Intelligence, such as Natural Language Processing, Optic Character recognition etc. and then moves on to applications including review systems, intelligent interfaces, chatbots and knowledge systems. We will also explore distinct regulatory issues surrounding AI.

Further, the course looks at the growing popularity of Blockchain technology. Students will be introduced to the concept of distributed ledger – an immutable set of records with time-stamped signatures that could significantly reduce the number of disputes and guarantee the security of digital value. Students will look at the impact that smart contracts have on the industries and assess their ability to push towards more standardisation and create more efficiency in various areas of human interaction.

Internet of things is also considered as part of the module to demonstrate how big data is generated and utilised to further promote machine learning in the future. We will assess regulatory challenges around the Internet of things, focusing on privacy and autonomy harms.

General Learning Outcome

On successful completion of the course, students will be able to:

- Understand the concept of disruptive technologies;
- Critically analyse similarities and differences between the UK/EU regulatory frameworks and comparable international regimes in the area;
- Demonstrate knowledge and understanding of the key concepts underpinning privacy and data protection law, how data protection law works in practice, and of salient legal and regulatory issues within the field;

M.Sc. Governance, Risk and Compliance

- Understand how technologies could be utilized to build an effective, coherent and secure ecosystem;
- Assess the benefits of introducing Artificial Intelligence, Blockchain and smart contracts / smart documents to the day-to-day working of the profession;
- Demonstrate the ability to use disruptive technologies to address practical issues and problems;
- Demonstrate the ability to use appropriate type of technology based on the wider needs of the business;
- Understand the regulatory process and outstanding regulatory issues in relation to disruptive technologies;

Learning methods

The module is heavily learner-centred and utilizes elements of distance learning. Delivery will involve the completion of a range of activities combining academic and practice-focused learning.

This will include the use of more online learning activities as well as simulated exercises requiring a good understanding of innovative technologies. Doctrinal, practical, conceptual and strategic/tactical issues will be considered. Learners have access to comprehensive online resources, interactive tutorials, and test and feedback exercises.

COURSE STRUCTURE OUTLINE

WEEK 1_ Introduction to the Module: The regulation of the Internet and emerging technologies – theory and practice

Objectives

This session provides a general overview of the course the key areas to be covered, the learning objectives, the teaching methodology. It also invites candidates to consider the key principles of Internet governance, both from a theoretical and practical perspective. This will equip the candidates with the necessary background knowledge, which they can apply to specific regulatory issues of emerging technologies considered later in the course.

Expected Learning Outcomes

- Assess key regulatory theories of the Internet and technology
- Understand international aspects of regulation, key institution and regulatory landscapes
- Understand the concept of disruptive technologies.
- Understand which technologies are likely to disrupt the future of business.

WEEK 2_ The regulation of Internet platforms – online harms and the law

Objectives

This session looks at the specific ways of regulating online platforms, meaning a very wide range of companies that allow users to share or discover user-generated content or interact with each other online (e.g. social media platforms, file-hosting sites, public discussion forums, messaging services and search engines). We will apply regulatory theories learned in session 1 and discuss regulatory efforts that aim to curb the power of online platforms. We will assess the existing and emerging regulation of online platforms in the EU, the US and discuss to what extent these may be applicable to the Cypriot business context.

Expected Learning Outcomes

- Assess challenges that online platform pose to regulators and their users
- Understand international aspects of regulation pertaining to platforms and the concept of ‘intermediary liability’
- Understand the concept of online harms and different ways of regulating harms on the Internet
- Critically evaluate regulatory and legislative attempts to tackle online harms around the world
- Assess the idea of imposing ‘duty of care’ on online platforms

Keywords

- Regulation of platforms
- Intermediary liability
- Online harms
- Duty of care
- Social media
- Human rights

Introductory Comments

Online platforms are strong drivers of innovation and play an important role in Europe's digital society and economy. They cover a wide range of activities including online marketplaces, social media, creative content outlets, app stores, price comparison websites, platforms for the collaborative economy as well as search engines. They increase consumer choice, improve efficiency and competitiveness of industry and can enhance civil participation in society. (Source European Commission: Link)

M.Sc. Governance, Risk and Compliance

Such platforms share key characteristics, such as the:

- use of information and communication technologies to facilitate interactions between users,
- collection and use of data about such interactions, and
- network effects.

Online platforms have transformed the way we shop, travel, socialise, learn and work. These transformations have happened rapidly and the expansion of the platform economy shows no signs of slowing down.

Effectively, the digital economy is increasingly shaped by online platforms serving as marketplaces where customers can buy goods or book services (eg Airbnb, Uber, Amazon). Their dynamics can be difficult to reconcile with the currently existing regulatory framework at EU level. Current laws only regulate bilateral consumer-trader relations.

Platforms on the other hand represent triangular-based business models that require the customer and supplier not only to make an agreement between each other, but also that they each conclude an agreement with a platform operator. The result is that in many situations customers that conclude contracts through online platforms are left without effective consumer protection. These platforms are vastly different and any regulation will have to provide for different measures depending on whether a platform is merely a 'facilitator' or is actually the supplier, or presents itself as such.

There are clear benefits to platforms that allow consumers to compare prices, travel more conveniently, find work, learn new skills and connect with people they would otherwise not meet. There are also many political and regulatory issues that arise from the advent of platforms, such as their impact on businesses and individuals who use the platform, ensuring consumer rights are upheld, dealing with illegal content, how taxes should be levied, how competition law should be applied, and compliance with local laws and standards.

In recent years, national legislators in EU Member States have been pushing for new laws to combat negative societal phenomena such as hateful or terrorist content online. These regulatory efforts have one common denominator: they shift the focus from conditional intermediary liability to holding intermediaries directly responsible for the dissemination of illegal content on their platforms.

WEEK 3_ The concept of privacy and challenges posed by emerging technologies

Objectives

This session looks at introductory aspects and theoretical perspectives of privacy as a concept and the right to privacy as established by the European Convention of Human Rights. Briefly, we will examine how scholars define privacy and what are the essential elements of this concept, before looking at specific challenges that emerging technologies bring. We will also explore the balance between privacy and other human rights, such as free speech.

Expected Learning Outcomes

- Understand key theories of privacy
- Understand aspects of privacy as a human right in the EU and the Council of Europe
- Critically evaluate disruptive technologies and their impact on privacy
- Understand the relationship between privacy and data protection

Keywords

- Privacy
- Human rights
- Privacy theories
- European Convention of Human Rights
- European Charter of Fundamental Rights
- Privacy harms and emerging technologies

Introductory Comments

Data privacy, also called information privacy, is the aspect of information technology (IT) that deals with the ability an organization or individual has to determine in a computer system what data can be shared with third parties.

Privacy and Data Protection: With the rise of social networking technologies and companies' increasing focus on personalizing consumer experiences in the online sphere, privacy and data protection today are important issues to numerous industries.

Protection of privacy of individuals.

M.Sc. Governance, Risk and Compliance

Mass data flows and connectivity of everyday devices asks difficult questions about how we can best protect individuals' fundamental right of privacy. Smart devices record personal preferences, habits, lifestyles and health patterns, providing useful information to companies to improve products and services.

Emerging, data-heavy technologies therefore carry a unique set of privacy challenges. Communication between smart devices can often be triggered automatically and the digital boundaries of that communication may be poorly defined. Add to this that there may be many different stakeholders carrying out separate activities within the data processing lifecycle – from device manufacturers to data-aggregators and application developers, who may seek to repurpose that data for entirely different uses. Intrusive practises can mean that what might have once been anonymised or insignificant user data may be used to make more consequential inferences.

Lack of user control is therefore a huge issue and pervasive across technological developments. But for businesses, the need to obtain specific, informed consent from individuals for each kind of processing of their data is likely to present challenges where traditional consent mechanisms are not up to the task.

Human rights have developed an established set of norms, specific language, institutional network and infrastructure for thinking about new technologies, their relevance, or the potential challenges posed by their application. The key concern is whether this development can prove adequate in protecting individuals and securing their rights from dangers arising from the use of emerging technologies. Another concern is the delicate balance between the right to privacy and other human rights, such as the freedom of expression. We will explore these tensions and challenges in the law, as well as their theoretical underpinnings.

Learning Activities:

- What are the key theoretical conceptualisations of privacy? Consider the categorisation of privacy within the literature.
- Identify a few different aspects of privacy in literature and discuss what, in your opinion, is the most appropriate way to regulate these.
 - This exercise will require you to undertake your own research to identify different types and aspects of privacy. You should analyse the key issues they raise for regulation, and what are the most important current challenged that technology poses to privacy. You will be asked to discuss your findings in small groups, and then feedback to the entire seminar group.

WEEK 4_ Data protection 1 – principles and data subject rights

Objectives

In this session, we will discuss the basics of data protection. We will look into some of the most significant concepts and principles in more depth, as well as some of the data subject rights. In particular, we will focus on the right to be forgotten, the right to data portability, automated individual decision-making and privacy by design and default. These are some of the key legislative innovations introduced by GDPR, as a result of the impact emerging technologies have had on privacy and data protection.

Expected Learning Outcomes

- Understand the basics of GDPR and data protection principles
- Understand data subject rights set out in GDPR
- Critically evaluate and assess in more detail certain data subject rights (the right to be forgotten, the right to data portability, automated individual decision-making)
- Understand the concepts of privacy by design and default, and how these affect businesses and their innovation

Keywords

- GDPR
- Data protection principles
- Data subject rights
- The right to be forgotten
- The right to data portability
- Automated individual decision-making
- Privacy by design and default

Introductory Comments

GDPR is a regulation that requires businesses and other organizations to protect the personal data and privacy of EU citizens for transactions that occur within EU member states. And non-compliance could cost companies dearly. At its core, GDPR is a new set of rules designed to give EU citizens more control over their personal data. It aims to simplify the regulatory environment for business so both citizens and businesses in the European Union can fully benefit from the digital economy.

M.Sc. Governance, Risk and Compliance

The right to be forgotten derives from the case Google Spain SL, Google Inc v Agencia Española de Protección de Datos, Mario Costeja González (2014). For the first time, the right to be forgotten is codified and to be found in the General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR) in addition to the right to erasure.

The correspondingly-named rule primarily regulates erasure obligations. According to this, personal data must be erased immediately where the data are no longer needed for their original processing purpose, or the data subject has withdrawn his consent and there is no other legal ground for processing, the data subject has objected and there are no overriding legitimate grounds for the processing, or erasure is required to fulfil a statutory obligation under the EU law or the right of the Member States. In addition, data must naturally be erased if the processing itself was against the law in the first place. (Source GDPR Info – Link)

The right to data portability allows individuals to obtain and reuse their personal data for their own purposes across different services. It allows them to move, copy or transfer personal data easily from one IT environment to another in a safe and secure way, without affecting its usability. Doing this enables individuals to take advantage of competition and innovation, and identify applications and services that can use this data to find them a better deal or help them understand their spending habits.

GDPR also brings some additional principles to the data protection regime, such as privacy by design and default, transparency and accountability etc.

WEEK 5_ Data protection 2 – e-Privacy

Objectives

In this session, we will discuss data protection and privacy in the electronic communications sector. We will look into issues surrounding cookies, traffic and location data, online advertising and the applicable EU laws. We will evaluate the impact of disruptive technologies on online advertising in particular, as well as the privacy concerns surrounding their use in targeted and behavioural advertising. We will also look at the impact of machine learning on advertising and associated privacy risks.

Expected Learning Outcomes

- Understand the basics of e-Privacy Directive (Regulation) and provisions related to the use of cookies, location and traffic data, meta-data
- Understand subscriber and user rights in the context of e-Privacy
- Critically evaluate and assess the EU law reforms in the area of e-Privacy and online advertising
- Consider the impact of online advertising on political speech and democratic processes

Keywords

- e-Privacy
- Location and traffic data
- Meta-data
- Tracking walls
- Cookies
- Online behavioural advertising
- Machine learning, algorithms and advertising

Introductory Comments

The ePrivacy Regulation is an attempt to streamline and improve EU laws regarding privacy of communications through users' electronic devices. It targets the use of cookies and other tracking technologies, electronic marketing, metadata processing and so called 'over-the-top' communication services like WhatsApp and Skype.

Although there is some overlap between the ePrivacy Regulation and the GDPR, in practice these regulations are intended to complement each other in the protection of individuals' personal data and how this data is used by the entities possessing it. The GDPR has a very broad scope concerning the collection and processing of 'Personal Data' of individuals, and applies to all sectors and industries. The ePrivacy Regulation on the other hand, is intended to safeguard the privacy of individuals in the context of the various channels of electronic communications.

M.Sc. Governance, Risk and Compliance

One of the most controversial issues within the upcoming trilogue procedure on the ePrivacy Regulation will be a possible ban on tracking walls, also known as cookie walls.

Under the new ePrivacy Regulation, user consent will be required for the use of tracking cookies. It then follows that website operators will wish to make use of their website dependent on the user agreeing to their usage behaviour being tracked. A cookie wall is erected to make this possible. This wall denies access to the website if the user does not consent to the use of cookies for tracking purposes such as ad targeting.

Cookies are files stored on a computer's browser by websites which can be used for various purposes, often related to marketing or online behavioral advertising. While cookies by themselves cannot dig or research your information or search your computer, they do store personal information in at least two ways—form information and ad tracking. This personal information is not generated by the cookies themselves but by your own input into websites' order forms, registration pages, payment pages, and other online forms. Often used for ecommerce, this information is often encoded and protected from hacking by the remote server through limited interaction via security features like secure sockets layers (SSL) certified pages and similar network security schemes.

Other types of data used for advertising and other purposes include traffic and location data, as well as meta-data (data about data). E-privacy regime regulates the use of these types of data as well.

Required readings:

- E-Privacy Directive 2002/2009
- E-Privacy Regulation 2020 (when adopted)

Learning Activities:

- Please prepare a short oral presentation describing how a complex technology related to online advertising works (max 3 minutes). Your audience is a hypothetical decision-maker such as a government bureaucrat working for an administrative agency, a judge, or a private entity such as an arbitrator or corporate administrator. You should assume that your audience is versed in the law and generally sophisticated but relatively ignorant about advanced technology.

List of Technologies (choose from here or pick your own)

- Packet sniffers/Deep Packet Inspection
 - Web bugs
 - Web cookies
 - Browser fingerprinting
 - Biometric recognition (e.g. facial recognition)
 - Heat sensing cameras
 - Privacy-Enhancing Technologies
 - TOR (The Onion Router)
 - Public key encryption
 - Multi-factor authentication
- Pick an online business model (company, digital service) funded mostly by advertising and familiarise yourself with technologies they use for advertising. What are the privacy risks of your chosen business model?
 - Consider consent requirements for the use of cookies, as established in the EU law. Can you identify key legal and technological issues related to the provision and obtainment of this WEEK 6_ Introduction to Artificial Intelligence

Objective

This week students are introduced to the concept of Artificial Intelligence and automation. Many of us do not realize that AI tools have now entered the stage of widespread adoption and that even everyday algorithms we use for internet search or product/content searches are now powered by AI. From simple knowledge trees developed in the 1980-s to chatbot interfaces, students are encouraged to explore the AI tools that do not necessarily involve sophisticated machine learning algorithms.

Expected Learning Outcomes

- Understanding the fundamentals of artificial intelligence and automation
- Understanding how automation of certain tasks could raise productivity of the business
- Considering the inward (firm facing) and outward (client-facing) AI solutions
- Understanding the concept of Intelligent interfaces
- Understanding the significance of incorporating AI solutions into the Business Process

Keywords

- AI
- Automation
- Search engines
- Knowledge trees and Wisdom/Expert Systems
- Intelligent Interfaces
- Chatbots

Introductory Comments

In computer science, artificial intelligence (AI) is intelligence demonstrated by machines, in contrast to the natural intelligence displayed by humans.

The terms Artificial Intelligence and Automation may sometimes be used interchangeably. They're associated with software or physical robots and other machines that allow for a more efficient and effective operation — whether it's a mechanical construct piecing together a car or sending a follow-up email the day after your customer hasn't completed his order. However, there are pretty big differences between complexity level of both systems. Automation is basically making a hardware or software that is capable of doing things automatically — without human intervention. Artificial Intelligence, however, is a science and engineering of making intelligent machines (according to John McCarthy, person who coined this term). AI is all about trying to make machines or software mimic, and eventually supersede human behaviour and intelligence.

M.Sc. Governance, Risk and Compliance

Intelligent interface is a communication between a human and a computer that mimics natural language. It can also predict what people want to do, analyze this information, and use it accordingly. In the profound Deloitte article (Link), the intelligent interface is shown as a combination of human-centered design and advanced technologies that changes the way people interact with computers, information, and each other.

An example to better understand what intelligent interface: imagine that you are shopping online. With the help of special AI-fueled techniques, the retailer can identify your shopping behavior. Based on the received data, he can send you personalized notifications that could motivate you to make a purchase faster. Real-time data captured from buyer's phone, for example, – comparison of prices on a certain product online, – can help retailers send well-conceived offerings to their customers.

Additional readings:

- AI Experiments with Google, available at <https://experiments.withgoogle.com/collection/ai>

Learning Activities:

- In preparation for this session, candidates are asked to conduct independent research and prepare at least 2 internet articles discussing real-life examples of Artificial Intelligence adoption.
- Considering the materials above and the scenario published, answer the following questions:
 - a. Which of the scenarios are most suitable for automation?
 - b. From your independent research, could you suggest an automaton solution most suitable for the business?

M.Sc. Governance, Risk and Compliance

- c. Should business needs be considered when choosing the automation solution?
- d. How might these considerations affect the choice of the AI tool and why?
- e. Research Alpha Go computer programme. In preparation for the next week's session consider the following questions:
- f. What do you think were the shortcomings of the Alpha Go algorithm?
- g. What are the next logical stages in Artificial Intelligence development?

WEEK 7_ The Concept of Machine Learning

Objective

To understand the more sophisticated Artificial Intelligence tools students are introduced to the concept of machine learning algorithms. The session considers both the concept and process of Machine learning. We shall discuss the types of ML and types of pattern formation. Students are also encouraged to consider the significance of the volumes and quality of data as a basis for improving the performance of ML algorithms. We consider the essential tools that enable intelligent interfaces. Machine perception is the capability of the computers understand and interpret data, in a similar manner to how humans use their senses to interpret the world around. Candidates are invited to consider worldwide developments and advances in both hardware and software in the areas of Natural Language Processing, Optical Character Recognition etc. Examples of Chatbot applications and Wisdom Systems (discussion in the previous sessions) are used to demonstrate practical use for the AI toolkit.

Expected Learning Outcomes

- Understanding the concept of Machine Learning
- Understanding the significance of big data
- Being able to explain pattern formation
- Distinguishing between supervised and unsupervised machine learning
- Understanding how perception tools allow computers to have extended sensory engagement with the human world
- Being able to explain how computer algorithms understand natural human language
- Considering the use of neural networks for character recognition

Introductory Comments

Deep learning is a machine learning technique that teaches computers to do what comes naturally to humans: learn by example. Deep learning is a key technology behind driverless cars, enabling them to recognize a stop sign, or to distinguish a pedestrian from a lamppost. It is the key to voice control in consumer devices like phones, tablets, TVs, and hands-free speakers.

In deep learning, a computer model learns to perform classification tasks directly from images, text, or sound. Deep learning models can achieve state-of-the-art accuracy, sometimes exceeding human-level performance. Models are trained by using a large set of labelled data and neural network architectures that contain many layers.

Deep learning may be seen as a type of machine learning (ML) and artificial intelligence (AI) that imitates the way humans gain certain types of knowledge. Deep learning is an important element of data science, which includes statistics and predictive modeling. It is extremely beneficial to data scientists who are tasked with collecting, analyzing and interpreting large amounts of data; deep learning makes this process faster and easier.

At its simplest, deep learning can be thought of as a way to automate predictive analytics. While traditional machine learning algorithms are linear, deep learning algorithms are stacked in a hierarchy of increasing complexity and abstraction.

An example of deep learning: imagine a toddler whose first word is dog. The toddler learns what a dog is -- and is not -- by pointing to objects and saying the word dog. The parent says, "Yes, that is a dog," or, "No, that is not a dog." As the toddler continues to point to objects, he becomes more aware of the features that all dogs possess. What the toddler does, without knowing it, is clarify a complex abstraction -- the concept of dog -- by building a hierarchy in which each level of abstraction is created with knowledge that was gained from the preceding layer of the hierarchy.

Neural networks are a set of algorithms, modeled loosely after the human brain, that are designed to recognize patterns. They interpret sensory data through a kind of machine perception, labeling or clustering raw input. The patterns they recognize are numerical, contained in vectors, into which all real-world data, be it images, sound, text or time series, must be translated.

Neural networks help us cluster and classify. You can think of them as a clustering and classification layer on top of the data you store and manage. They help to group unlabeled data according to similarities among the example inputs, and they classify data when they have a labeled dataset to train on. (Neural networks can also extract features that are fed to other algorithms for clustering and classification; so you can think of deep neural networks as components of larger machine-learning applications involving algorithms for reinforcement learning, classification and regression.)

Big data is a term that describes the large volume of data – both structured and unstructured – that inundates a business on a day-to-day basis. But it's not the amount of data that's important. It's what organizations do with the data that matters. Big data can be analyzed for insights that lead to better decisions and strategic business moves.

WEEK 8_ Applied AI

Objective

This is a practice-oriented session, where unseen scenarios are distributed to the candidates. They are expected to identify potential issues arising out of each scenario and try to identify an AI solution that would better suit the use case. As this session utilizes an issue-driven practice inspired approach, candidates are not only expected to consider the technical parameters of each automation solution, but also the needs of the business, such as speed of delivery, time framework for adaptation, availability of the budget.

Learning Outcomes:

- Students are expected to demonstrate how their theoretical knowledge could be applied to practical scenarios.
- Students are expected to demonstrate an understanding of the needs of the business as well as technical characteristics of the available automation tools and be able to find the solution best suited to the needs in each presented case.
- Attain an understanding of how automation tools are adopted in practice.
- Understanding the rate of the adoption rate and being able to predict adoption in a chosen area.

Keywords:

- Artificial Intelligence
- Machine learning
- Automation tools
- Machine perception
- Inward-facing solution
- Outward-facing solution

Introductory Comments

Artificial Intelligence (AI) and Machine Learning (ML) are two very hot buzzwords right now, and often seem to be used interchangeably.

Nevertheless it important to highlight that Artificial Intelligence is the broader concept of machines being able to carry out tasks in a way that we would consider “smart” while Machine Learning is a current application of AI based around the idea that we should really just be able to give machines access to data and let them learn for themselves.

AI Systems often incorporate artificial intelligence, machine learning, and deep learning to create a sophisticated intelligence machine that will perform given human functions well. Increasingly, all three units are individual pieces of the entire AI System's intelligence puzzle.

Machine Learning — It is an application of artificial intelligence that provides the AI System with the ability to automatically learn from the environment and applies that learning to make better decisions. There are a variety of algorithms that Machine Learning uses to iteratively learn, describe and improve data in order to predict better outcomes. These algorithms use statistical techniques to spot patterns and then perform actions on these patterns.

Required Readings:

- Sebastian Dark Martin Ford, Architects of Intelligence: The truth about AI from the people building it, (2018) Packt Publishing

WEEK 9_ Blockchain Technology as a disruption to industries

Objective

Candidates are introduced to the concept of Blockchain Technology. In this session, the benefits of time-stamped immutable system are explained in relation to the current issues with Cloud computing. In preparation for this session candidates are expected to complete a multiple-choice test online to familiarise themselves with the main attributes of the technology. In this session, we will also look at two aspects of cryptographical protection offered by the Blockchain technology: hash function, its use to time-stamp and protect the data; the concept of merkel trees. Candidates are also introduced to the concept of private and public keys and their use to verify value transfers on the Blockchain. Students are invited to explore the various types of consensus algorithms. Proof-of-work algorithm is used as an example. Students are invited to consider the process of solving a cryptographical puzzle as additional protection for assets/value stored on the Blockchain.

Learning Outcomes:

- Understanding the issues linked to the centralized approach to storing valuable information and transferring value
- Understanding the concepts of distributed ledger technology and Blockchain technology
- Understanding how decentralization could achieve greater security for data
- Understanding how cryptography is used to protect data and any valued transferred using peer-to-peer Blockchain technology

Keywords:

- Hash function
- Merkel Tree
- Private / Public key
- Consensus mechanism
- Proof-of-Work

M.Sc. Governance, Risk and Compliance

Introductory Comments

Distributed ledger: It is a database that exists across several locations or among multiple participants. By contrast, most companies currently use a centralised database that lives in a fixed location. A centralised database essentially has a single point of failure. However, a distributed ledger is decentralized to eliminate the need for a central authority or intermediary to process, validate or authenticate transactions. Enterprises use distributed ledger technology to process, validate or authenticate transactions or other types of data exchanges. Typically, these records are only ever stored in the ledger when the consensus has been reached by the parties involved.

A Blockchain is the technology the underpins digital currency (Bitcoin, Litecoin, Ethereum, and the like). The tech allows digital information to be distributed, but not copied. That means each individual piece of data can only have one owner. It is essentially a shared database filled with entries that must be confirmed and encrypted. An easy way to understand is to think of it as a highly secure and verified Office 365 document. Each document entry dependent on a logical relationship to all its predecessors. The name blockchain refers to the “blocks” that get added to the chain of transaction records. To facilitate this, the technology uses cryptographic signatures called a hash.

The most important difference to remember is that blockchain is just one type of distributed ledger. Although blockchain is a sequence of blocks, distributed ledgers do not require such a chain. Furthermore, distributed ledgers do not need proof of work and offer – theoretically – better scaling options.

WEEK 10_ Blockchain of Value: Case for Cryptoassets and Cryptocurrencies

Objective

In this session, the concept of crypto assets and cryptocurrencies is explained. Candidates are invited to consider the use of Blockchain technology for variety of use cases and identify the benefits entailed by the use of the technology.

Bitcoin network is explained in detail along with a detailed explanation of other cryptocurrencies. Students are invited to consider the difference between Altcoins and currencies created as a result of Bitcoin forks.

Learning Outcomes:

- Understand the concept of cryptocurrencies.
- Understanding the Bitcoin network as an example of value transfer technology.
- Understanding the process behind the creation of cryptocurrencies using mining as an example.
- Understanding the entire process of transferring Bitcoins from one valet to another.
- Understanding the challenges faces by cryptocurrencies.

Keywords:

M.Sc. Governance, Risk and Compliance

Introductory Comments

Cryptocurrency is an internet-based medium of exchange which uses cryptographical functions to conduct financial transactions. Cryptocurrencies leverage blockchain technology to gain decentralization, transparency, and immutability. The most important feature of a cryptocurrency is that it is not controlled by any central authority: the decentralized nature of the blockchain makes cryptocurrencies theoretically immune to the old ways of government control and interference. Cryptocurrencies can be sent directly between two parties via the use of private and public keys. These transfers can be done with minimal processing fees, allowing users to avoid the steep fees charged by traditional financial institutions.

Bitcoin offers the promise of lower transaction fees than traditional online payment mechanisms and is operated by a decentralized authority, unlike government-issued currencies. There are no physical bitcoins, only balances kept on a public ledger in the cloud, that – along with all Bitcoin transactions – is verified by a massive amount of computing power. Bitcoins are not issued or backed by any banks or governments, nor are individual bitcoins valuable as a commodity. Despite it not being legal tender, Bitcoin charts high on popularity, and has triggered the launch of hundreds of other virtual currencies collectively referred to as Altcoins.

Cryptocurrency mining, or cryptomining, is a process in which transactions for various forms of cryptocurrency are verified and added to the blockchain digital ledger. Also known as cryptocoins mining, altcoin mining, or Bitcoin mining (for the most popular form of cryptocurrency, Bitcoin), cryptocurrency mining has increased both as a topic and activity as cryptocurrency usage itself has grown exponentially in the last few years.

In the context of cryptocurrency mining, a mining pool is the pooling of resources by miners, who share their processing power over a network, to split the reward equally, according to the amount of work they contributed to the probability of finding a block. A "share" is awarded to members of the mining pool who present a valid partial proof-of-work.

Each time a cryptocurrency transaction is made, a cryptocurrency miner is responsible for ensuring the authenticity of information and updating the blockchain with the transaction. The mining process itself involves competing with other cryptominers to solve complicated mathematical problems with cryptographic hash functions that are associated with a block containing the transaction data.

The first cryptocurrency miner to crack the code is rewarded by being able to authorize the transaction, and in return for the service provided, cryptominers earn small amounts of cryptocurrency of their own. In order to be competitive with other cryptominers, though, a cryptocurrency miner needs a computer with specialized hardware.

WEEK 11_ Applied Blockchain: the concept of smart contracts and smart documents

Objective

In this session, the concept of smart contracts as self-executing pieces of codes is considered in detail. Students are invited to distinguish between 'smart contracts' in their traditional sense and smart documents with Blockchain IDs.

Learning Outcomes:

- Understanding the difference between smart contracts and smart documents.
- Considering real-life scenarios of applied blockchain and the use of smart documents.

Keywords:

- Smart contracts
- Smart documents
- Blockchain ID
- Transparency
- Immutability

Introductory Comments

One of the best things about the blockchain is that, because it is a decentralized system that exists between all permitted parties, there's no need to pay intermediaries (Middlemen) and it saves you time and conflict. Despite certain flaws, blockchains are rated, undeniably, faster, cheaper, and more secure than traditional systems, which is why banks and governments are turning to them.

A smart contract is a computer protocol intended to digitally facilitate, verify, or enforce the negotiation or performance of a contract. Smart contracts allow the performance of credible transactions without third parties.

Smart contracts can be termed as the most utilized application of blockchain technology in the current times. The concept of smart contracts was introduced by Nick Szabo, a legal scholar, and cryptographer in the year 1994. He came to a conclusion that any decentralized ledger can be used as self-executable contracts which, later on, were termed as Smart Contracts. These digital contracts could be converted into codes and allowed to be run on a blockchain.

Personal identity is one of the fundamental human rights as per Article 8 of the UN's Convention on the Rights of the Child. At its most basic level, identity consists of:

M.Sc. Governance, Risk and Compliance

- First and last name.
- Date of birth.
- Nationality.
- Some form of a national identifier such as passport number, social security number (SSN), driving license, etc.

The importance of identity can't be overstated. Without a valid form of ID, one can't own property, vote, receive government services, open a bank account, or find full-time employment. Without control over one's identity, it is easy to become invisible and be unable to participate in society simply because one can't prove that they are who they say they are.

However, there is a big problem plaguing this space. All this data, such as passport number, SSN, driving license are stored in centralized servers and databases. This leads to three major issues:

- Only these centralized entities can give out identities.
- These centralized entities can mishandle your personal data.
- Identity theft.

Trustworthy digital identification has been “one of the main challenges facing the internet ever since it was invented, because none of the traditional, offline means of verifying that someone is who they say they are apply¹.” Furthermore, digital IDs can raise questions about central points of failure and surveillance states if these IDs are created, stored, and managed by a central authority.

WEEK 12_ AI and Blockchain: Regulatory Prospects

Objective

This session considers regulatory challenges to regulation of disruptive technologies. Examples of regulatory practices from various jurisdictions are used to provide an overview of the current issues:

- US
- Switzerland
- Malta
- UK regulatory approach

Learning Outcomes:

- Understanding the issues behind regulating AI tools and Blockchain technology
- Understanding worldwide trends in regulation of disruptive technologies
- Understanding which jurisdictions are actively regulating the disruptive technologies.

Keywords:

- Regulatory authorities
- Sandboxes
- Blockchain-based business
- Ledger lawyer
- ICO

Introductory Comments

Emerging technologies such as AI and blockchain pose some difficult questions for regulators. In the recent years, regulators around the world have contemplated ways to tackle issues such as the ethical use of technology, algorithmic governance and discrimination, privacy and data protection, personhood, the use of blockchain in the legal profession and the industry. Key regulators include data protection, market, competition, and telecommunications regulators. Various jurisdictions have introduced regulatory mechanism and law reforms to try and address some of the open questions and to catch up with the rapidly developing technology and its use cases.

M.Sc. Governance, Risk and Compliance

In this lecture, we will explore emerging and existing regulatory and law reforms, and evaluate them against the regulatory principles discussed at the beginning of this course.

Learning Activities:

- Based on your reading and research, which jurisdictions are more favourable towards AI-based business?
- Based on your reading and research, which jurisdictions are more favourable towards Blockchain-based business?
- Why is there an argument against regulating technologies at this stage of their development? Be able to substantiate your answer with reference to examples.

WEEK 13_ The Internet of Things

Objective

This session includes a brief mention of the history of the Internet of things (IoT). Students are introduced to the concept of IoT and asked to model scenarios where interconnected appliances could be used in real-life scenarios. They are asked to explain what value is derived from the automation of this function. Digitization of the data, automation of tasks through the use of AI and storing personal data on the devices in the IoT invariably raises issues of security. Blockchain technology, offering security to transfer of data and transfer of value is heralded as a solution to many security issues we are facing today. All three concepts are brought together in this penultimate session. Their value, interplay, state of development and outstanding issues are considered.

Learning Outcomes:

- Understanding the potential speed of adoption for the Internet of Things.
- Understanding the value of data derived from smart appliances.
- Understanding the issues connected to the quick progression of the Internet of Things.
- Understanding the potential privacy issues connected to the Internet of Things
- Understanding the security issues connected to the Internet of Things.

Learning Activities:

- Based on your understanding what are the main issues that need to be resolved for a smooth progression of the Internet of Things?
- Explain how the Internet of Things could be connected to the previously discussed technologies
- What are the privacy and security concerns that are raised by the Internet of Things?
- Do you think that Blockchain technology could be used to resolve the aforementioned issues?
- Is the regulatory framework up to date to cater for the progression of the Internet of Things?

M.Sc. Governance, Risk and Compliance

WEEK 14_ Concluding Consolidation session

Objective

This session is intended as a Q and A session to cater to the candidate's desire to expand or clarify certain concepts covered throughout the course.

Learning Outcomes:

- Considering the outstanding questions and issues.
- Revising the covered material.
- Preparing for the final assessment.

Keywords:
